SCHOOL BOARD TO BORROW

FACING FINANCIAL CRISIS BECAUSE OF NEW TAX SITUATION

Lacks Payroll Funds;
Officers Re-elected
Monday Night

Facing a financial crisis, attributed to the complex new tax laws and other conditions beyond its control, the Xenia city board of education, it was revealed at the annual reorganization meeting Monday night, must borrow more than $4,000 within the next ten days in order to meet the next bi-monthly payroll amounting to $5,200 for salaries of teachers, janitors and other employees in the Xenia public schools.

The payroll amounts to this sum every two weeks of the school year. At the close of the year 1931, with all outstanding bills paid, the school board had a treasury balance of $1,020.60 with no additional revenue now in sight until the next tax settlement.

The next payroll is due January 15 and the school board will hold its next regular meeting January 14.

It is pointed out that the collection of the December tax installment has not yet been started in Xenia city, and that the final date for payments will, of necessity, probably be extended another month beyond January 20.

This would delay the usual February settlement until late in March. In the event it is impossible to obtain advance draws on expected revenue as taxes are paid into the treasurer's office, the school board declares there will be only one alternative. In order to pay salaries as they become due every two weeks, the only solution of the difficulty will be to borrow money from time to time on anticipated receipts from the tax collection.

The new intangible tax law, school board members say, has upset all calculations, and there is no way to accurately estimate the probable funds to be derived for school purposes this year from general taxation. Last year a total of $116,000 was spent for general school purposes.

Present officers of the board were re-elected at the meeting as follows: James D. Adair, president; J. J. Stout, vice-president; Louis F. Clark, clerk-treasurer.

Three board members elected at the November election were sworn into office. C. A. Bone and Louis Clark, re-elected, commenced serving new terms of office. Fred Lang, auto dealer, is the only new member of the board. The retiring member is City Manager M. C. Smith, who was also present.

The board transacted no business at the organization meeting except to authorize the clerk to advertise for bids for a bank depository for school funds for the next two years.

MOTHER, CHILDREN SAVED FROM FLAMES

COLUMBUS, O., Jan. 5.—Awakened by neighbors, a mother and her eight children were saved early today from a fire that swept an east side store and apartment building here causing damages estimated at approximately $10,000.

The blaze, which was believed to have started in a carpet cleaning plant in the building, raged before it was brought under control by firemen.

Mrs. Edith McQuirt, who with her eight children was sleeping in a second-story apartment of the building, was awakened by neighbors. All were led to safety.

"HAVE YOU MET—"

"Mrs. Seller, meet Mrs. Buyer."

That's how Gazette classified ads "do the honors" in getting buyer and seller together quickly and cheaply.

Have we ever told you about the woman who advertised for a woman to do housework and received more than seventy applications?

Or of the Xenian who advertised for a baby stroller and received answers from sixteen persons who had just that article for sale?

Or of the woman who picked the pre-Christmas period to advertise an electric train for sale and disposed of it immediately?

These are things Gazette classified ads are doing. They are social little creatures—introducing buyer and seller, reminding readers of this special service or that, offering markets that are otherwise obscure, and fattening the pocketbooks of the thrifty with pin money.

If you haven't tried them, you are missing a golden opportunity. Just call 111—an ad taker will assist you in preparing your ad.

FIGHT TO KEEP SCHOOLS OPEN LED BY MAYOR

Chicago Executive Carries Issue To Legislature

CHICAGO, Jan. 5.—The grim battle to keep Chicago's schools open was carried to the state legislature by Mayor Anton Cermak today.

More than 22,000 parents of school children attended an indignation meeting last night. They loudly cheered Mayor Cermak when he announced he would demand reformation of the county taxing machinery, at Springfield today.

"Our only hope," the mayor said, "is for legislation under which taxpayers can pay money to the county treasurer and receive credit when the tax bills are sent out."

"Of course, I'm fearful of imposing service, but it seems there is no other way out. There is no question but that the schools will have to close. That is what we have come to and I want you to know it."

Reformation of the taxing machinery would serve as a foundation for the raising of funds to pay the long overdue salaries of school teachers and employees.

Citizens of the suburbs of Glenview, Brookfield and Western Springs took matters in their own hands today in an effort to raise cash to reopen the public schools.

At Western Springs a citizens' committee plans to sell teachers' orders to businessmen and merchants. School officials of Brookfield announced that classes will be resumed next Monday if the drive to sell tax anticipation warrants is successful.

GANDHI FOLLOWERS WILL PICKET SHOPS; MOSLEM HELP SEEN

FORCED TO YIELD

STEUBENVILLE, O., Jan. 5.—A promise made upon his inauguration that the administration would make effort to provide jobs for the unemployed today proved to be a boomerang upon Mayor James McMaster.

The seige of job-hunters since the new mayor took office has been so fierce that McMaster today went into temporary retirement, posting a sign that there were no more jobs and could be no more until council appropriated the money to carry on public work.

UNEMPLOYED BEGIN MARCH ON CAPITAL; 25,000 JOIN RANKS

Pittsburgh, Jan. 5.—Fortified with rations of six sandwiches and by two military bands blaring encouragement, more than 25,000 unemployed, converging on Pittsburgh to join the ranks of Rev. James R. Cox's jobless march to Washington, today departed for the nation's capital in 600 assorted trucks and automobiles.

Workers from every walk of life, "white-collar men" and laborers clad in overalls, milled about in the trucks as the signal to start was sounded. Choking the streets for twenty city blocks, the crowd exceeded even the most sanguine calculations. Father Cox's original estimate of 2,500 marchers. Many of the less fortunate were forced to take off on foot.

"It's a glorious success," shouted the militant Catholic priest who organized the demonstration as a protest against "Communists and fanatics," as he surveyed the mass of 45,000 persons, including 20,000 spectators and well-wishers, who watched the trek start.

"We'll get them to Washington; some way or other, we'll get them there," he promised as the column of walkers left in advance of the motor caravan.

From the entire western section of the state the marchers filtered into Pittsburgh during the night. Extra police and firemen were hastily mobilized to handle the cheering throngs of men for whom Rev. Cox will present to congress a demand for immediate relief.

No trouble was anticipated, although police were on the alert for Communists who were reported to be preparing to break up the march.

Almost in military formation, the men formed in ranks for registration and inspection before the march began. Dirty hands and faces were washed and unkempt beards shaved.

Even before dawn broke, almost every available seat in the long line of trucks was occupied.

The first stop of the caravan will be at Johnstown, Pa., where another large delegation of unemployed headed by Mayor Eddie McCloskey is expected to join the ranks of Rev. Cox's column.

From there, the marchers will head for Harrisburg where Gov. Gifford Pinchot has promised to address them with a message of encouragement.

The cavalcade will then turn south for Washington.

The men rode and walked without caste. In the motor caravan there were cheap cars alongside more imposing automobiles. In the delegation that walked, men of some business importance in better days clasped hands with laborers as they sang to the accompaniment of the band.

FOUR WORKERS ARE KILLED IN RIOTING

BARCELONA, Jan. 5.—Four rioters were killed in a demonstration of workers at Epila today when they clashed with civic guards. Scores were wounded, including ten of the guards.

Similar disturbances occurred throughout the vicinity and also near Valencia, where there were many casualties.

TREASURY BALANCE

WASHINGTON, Jan. 5.—Treasury balance as of Jan. 2, $479,114,333.69; expenditures, $4,053,403.03; customs receipts, $2,946,448.99.

Government Conducts Raids; More Riots Threatened

BOMBAY, Jan. 5.—The "war council" of the Indian nationalist congress swung into action today and ordered the followers of imprisoned Mahatma Gandhi to picket all the principal British shops in Bombay.

The government soon afterward struck a counter blow by outlawing forty-five congress bodies in Calcutta and raiding sixty offices of the Indian leaders, arresting scores.

The swift succession of events, in which both sides were striking fast in India's new war for independence from Britain, fore-shadowed further riots throughout the country similar to those of yesterday in which three were killed and scores wounded.

A surprise move on the part of certain Moslem leaders indicated that they might join the nationalist forces in their fight against Great Britain, and Gandhi's followers considered they had scored a victory.

Three of the country's foremost Moslems, Nawab Ismailkhan, Masood Ahmed, and Raja Saleem, officials of the all-party Moslem conference, resigned their offices on the grounds of the possible necessity of the Moslems joining the congress movement. Ismailkhan and Ahmed were president and secretary, respectively.

Previously the Moslems were decidedly against the Indian nationalist aims, but the move of the three leaders gave congress members hopes that their movement would be joined by the entire Moslem forces.

Aiming at the arrest of scores more of the leaders of the nationalist movement, the government today effected rules banning meetings, processions, and demonstrations in several large cities, including Calcutta, Madras, Lucknow, and Benares. These were in addition to the extensive repressive ordinances put into effect yesterday and which were the immediate cause of the riots.

Nationalist leaders are certain to attend the demonstrations regardless of the government's action against them, and thus laying themselves open to arrest.

The riot at Allahabad occurred when police dispersed a nationalist procession. Many were injured when natives, offering passive resistance, squatted in the road and refused to move. They were severely beaten by police who attacked them with lathis (staves).

After several hours of such sitting, the Satyagrahis, as the resisters are known, arose and announced they had won a victory over the police.

Other riots broke out at Calcutta, Bhowanipur, a suburb, Calcutta, and Mirakdim. Of these, the most serious was at Calcutta, where 2,000 nationalists refused to disperse from a meeting when they were ordered to do so.

DOCTOR FRIENDLY TO POOR IS BURIED

WOOSTER, O., Jan. 5.—Known throughout Wayne County as "the poor man's doctor," Dr. J. W. Lehr, 72, who died after practicing his profession nearly fifty years, was to be honored at his funeral services here today.

Dr. Lehr was never known to refuse a sick call during his many years as a physician here. He had been actively engaged in his profession until two months ago when he suffered an accident and was confined to his home.

WHERE DESPERADOES SLEW SIX OFFICERS

DEMOCRATS PREPARE TO RUSH TARIFF PROGRAM TO PRESIDENT

WASHINGTON, Jan. 5.—Creating a new issue for the 1932 presidential campaign, Democratic leaders of the house today set machinery in motion to rush its tariff program to President Hoover for approval or veto.

The ways and means committee met for brief hearings, as the first step in the campaign for passage of the program.

Stripping President Hoover of his tariff-making powers under the flexible provisions of the tariff law, calling for a permanent international economic conference to lower tariff barriers and authorizing the President to make international reciprocal agreements to cut the tariff, the program is one of the most far-reaching ever proposed by the Democrats.

A Republican counter-campaign was launched almost simultaneously with approval of the plan by the senate-house Democratic policy committee.

The Democratic leaders, however, were confident of a quick vote in the house, with passage slated this week.

Senate approval is believed assured, since a Democratic-insurgent Republican coalition adopted the Norris-Simmons amendment—keynote of the program—during the fight on the Hawley-Smoot Bill.

A veto by President Hoover is held equally certain. During the last tariff fight, Mr. Hoover disapproved the Norris-Simmons amendment, which provides that the tariff commission shall recommend increases or decreases to congress. It takes from the President

CHICAGO EMPLOYES FACING WAGE CUTS

CHICAGO, Jan. 5.—Chicago municipal employees faced a wage cut of 20 per cent today.

The wage slashing program was adopted by the city council when Mayor Anton Cermak announced that the only alternative was the immediate dismissal of more than 2,000 city employees.

Employees working on a monthly or yearly basis will be limited to twenty-four days work and pay each month. Those working on an hourly schedule will work but thirty-two hours a week.

The wage slash includes every city employee, from the mayor to the lowest laborer.

CHICKENS SUCCUMB

TIFFIN, O., Jan. 5.—Seneca County authorities today were confronted by a baffling mystery in connection with the deaths of 184 chickens on the farm of H. G. Hoffert south of here. The chickens, composing the entire flock, were found dead under their perches and investigation has failed to reveal the cause of the deaths.

Hertz, who assisted the authorities in the crime's solution, by his actions showed that he had expected a shorter term.

Prosecuting Attorney Donald J. Hoskins announced he would begin an immediate investigation of Cironce's age in the hope of having the alleged ringleader sentenced later today.

Angelo Ferruccio, 21, Frank Gattano and Edward Tangul, all of Canton, also have been indicted for the holdup but only Ferruccio is now under arrest.

Both men took the ruling calmly.

FUGITIVES TRACED THROUGH TEXAS AND BORDER IS GUARDED

Leader Discovered In Houston; Identify
One Suspect

(BULLETIN)

HOUSTON, Tex., Jan. 5.—Harry and Jennings Young, wholesale killers, came to the end of the trail here today.

Jennings is dead. Harry is dying.

They were believed to have shot themselves to cheat the law of extracting vengeance for the massacre of six possemen at Springfield, Mo., last Saturday.

HOUSTON, Tex., Jan. 5.—Hunted throughout the entire Southwest for the wholesale slaughter of six peace officers, the Young brothers, Missouri bad men, were believed nearing the end of their fugitive trail today.

Their 27-year-old leader, Harry Young, came within a narrow margin of being captured and today was thought hiding somewhere in the vicinity of Houston.

He was believed to be on the verge of starvation and complete exhaustion as thousands of Texas rangers and law enforcement officers of all categories relentlessly hounded him.

Hungry and tired, the hunted killer, it was conjectured, was today ready for the last desperate gamble in his flight, a sudden dash to the Mexican border.

Harry Young's appearance here yesterday afternoon was the only definite clue to the desperadoes' whereabouts.

It appeared certain that the young outlaw leader had separated from his brothers, Paul and Jennings and another supposed accomplice, Charles "Pretty Boy" Floyd, an Oklahoma gunman. Not one hopeful trace of the trail of Paul, Jennings and "Pretty Boy" was in possession of the authorities.

The fugitive, Lieut. Beverly declared, came to the home of his mother-in-law here and asked for his bride of three weeks. Upon learning his wife was not there, he boarded a bus and rode to a suburb on the eastern edge of the city.

The home of Young's mother-in-law and that of his sister-in-law were under heavy guard today.

SPRINGFIELD, Mo., Jan. 5.—The Young brothers, wanted for the massacre of six peace officers had a hitherto unsuspected accomplice in the bloody deed, it was declared today by Detective Ben Bilyeu, one of the survivors of Saturday night's farmhouse battle.

During the fatal siege of the Young farmhouse near here, Bilyeu said he recognized one of the sharpshooters outlaws as Fred Barker, a notorious bandit who was wanted for the killing of Sheriff Roy Kelly during a gun battle in White Plains, Mo.

The other aid was believed to have been Charles "Pretty Boy" Floyd, Oklahoma outlaw who is credited with eleven previous killings.

Although search for the young brothers and their supposed accomplices centered today in Houston, Tex., the efforts of possemen in this vicinity were not relaxed. The desolate woods and brushlands of the Ozark foothills were combed and all highways were still under heavy patrol.

Authorities continued to question Mrs. Willie Young, mother of the hunted men, their two sisters and another brother, Oscar. But, these relatives were able to furnish no information regarding the possible whereabouts of the killers.

A coroner's inquest resulted in the verdict that the six law officers were slain by Harry Young and others unknown.

Three of the victims were buried yesterday, while the entire community paid tribute to their heroism.

The post of Greene County sheriff, rendered vacant by the slaying of Hendrix, today was occupied by his widow. She was sworn into office and immediately took official part in the search for her husband's slayers.

BELIEVE HUNTERS FIRED FATAL SHOT

BRYAN, O., Jan. 5.—One of two hunters whose identities are known to Defiance County authorities today were believed to have fired the shot that killed 12-year-old Kathleen Carver at the rear door of a neighbor's farmhouse Sunday afternoon.

Although the men were a mile and a quarter away from the Walter Bender home where the child's body was found dead on the rear of Defiance County, expressed his conviction today that one of the bullets fired by them struck the girl.

SATISFACTION SOUGHT IN JAP CONTROVERSY

Official Apology Is Inadequate To End Dispute

TOKYO, Jan. 5.—The Japanese foreign office today stated officially that it regarded the Chamberlain incident as a closed affair.

An official statement declared this stand was taken in view of the official regrets expressed yesterday by the Japanese consul in Mukden, where the American consular official was painfully beaten by two Japanese soldiers and an army interpreter.

At the time this statement was issued, it was not known whether United States Secretary of State Stimson's emphatic protest over the incident, reported in press dispatches here, had been received by the Japanese foreign office.

A spokesman for the foreign office intimated that the expression of regrets conveyed by consular officials in Mukden and Harbin differed from a formal diplomatic apology.

The official "regrets" to which the statement referred were made in Mukden yesterday by Acting Consul General Morishima to Myrl S. Myers, American consul general there. Although officially "apologizing" for the affair, Morishima minimized its importance.

The Mukden explanation was regarded as "highly provocative" by the American consulate in its report to Washington.

It was after Stimson had been informed of the Mukden "apology" that he demanded "full and immediate satisfaction" from Tokyo.

So it was apparent the two nations stood completely at odds over the whole affair.

Diplomatic circles here were inclined to believe the matter was not a closed incident at all in view of the stand taken by the American state department.

Mukden army authorities dismissed the interpreter who took part in the assault upon Chamberlain, but indicated they would release the two sentries involved.

MUKDEN, Jan. 5.—Chinese bandit activities in Manchuria broke out anew today in the vicinity of Hsulin, and Japanese troops, aided by airplanes, were rushed from here to conduct a systematic campaign against them.

It was learned forty Chinese were killed and one Japanese officer and four soldiers were wounded in one battle in the area.

FOURTEEN TRAPPED

BEUTHEN, Upper Silesia, Germany, Jan. 5.—Fourteen miners were entombed by a coal mine explosion near here today. All were believed to have been killed.

After several hours of this sitting, the Satyagrahis, as the resisters are known, arose and announced they had won a victory over the police.

Other riots broke out at Calcutta, Bhowanipur, a suburb, Cawnpore and Mirskadim. Of these, the most serious was at Calcutta, where 2,000 nationalists refused to disperse from a meeting when they were ordered to do so.

DEMOCRATS PREPARE TO RUSH TARIFF PROGRAM TO PRESIDENT

WASHINGTON, Jan. 5.—Creating a new issue for the 1932 presidential campaign, Democratic leaders of the house today set machinery in motion to rush its tariff program to President Hoover for approval or veto.

The ways and means committee met for brief hearings, as the first step in the campaign for passage of the program.

Stripping President Hoover of his tariff-making powers under the flexible provisions of the tariff law, calling for a permanent international economic conference to lower tariff barriers and authorizing the President to make international reciprocal agreements to cut the tariff, the program is one of the most far-reaching ever proposed by the Democrats.

The Democratic leaders, however, were confident of a quick vote in the house, with passage slated this week.

Senate approval is believed assured, since a Democratic-insurgent Republican coalition adopted the Norris-Simmons amendment, the cornerstone of the program—during the fight on the Hawley-Smoot Bill.

A veto by President Hoover is held equally certain. During the last tariff fight, Mr. Hoover disapproved the Norris-Simmons amendment, which provides that a tariff commission shall recommend increases or decreases to congress. It takes from the President the power to veto or to sign the tariff law.

Charles G. Dawes, who will head the American delegates to the Geneva disarmament conference next month, began a series of conferences here today out of which will develop the administration's policy of insisting upon further drastic naval reduction.

It was perhaps a coincidence that on the very day of Dawes' arrival the house naval committee began hearings on the Vinson bill to spend $616,000,000 over the next ten years in building up the depleted American navy to London treaty strength.

President Hoover has expressed neither approval nor disapproval of the Vinson program, but it nevertheless has the solid backing of the navy general board, and of those elements in congress that have looked with increasing dismay at the decline in relative rank of the American naval establishment.

Washington generally is pessimistic over the prospects of much achievement at Geneva. World unrest and the intransigency of France are expected to operate as a brake on any ambitious program of reduction this year.

The make-up of the American delegation has contributed to this view. Not many experts will accompany the small American delegation of five persons, one a woman, as would be the case if there was any expectation of detailed cutting.

Instead of being naval in character, the American delegation is almost financial in character—a fact that has led to considerable speculation here as to just what is to constitute the main discussion at Geneva.

From time to time hints have been thrown out from high sources that the administration would look with favor toward a reduction of the European debts only in exchange for "real reduction in European armament."

These hints have never reached the stage of public proposals, but their frequent recurrence has provoked considerable discussion in and out of congress. Incidentally, congress has no intention of reducing or further scaling down the debts.

SATISFACTION SOUGHT IN JAP CONTROVERSY

Official Apology Is Inadequate To End Dispute

TOKYO, Jan. 5.—The Japanese foreign office today stated officially that it regarded the Chamberlain incident as a closed affair.

An official statement declared that an attempt was taken in view of the official regrets expressed yesterday by the Japanese consul in Mukden, where the American consular official was painfully beaten by two Japanese soldiers and an army interpreter.

At the time this statement was issued, it was not known whether United States Secretary of State Stimson's emphatic protest over the incident, reported in press dispatches here, had been received by the Japanese foreign office.

A spokesman for the foreign office intimated that the expression of regrets conveyed by consular officials in Mukden and Harbin differed from a formal diplomatic apology.

The official "regrets" to which the statement referred were made in Mukden yesterday by Acting Consul General Morishima to Myrl S. Myers, American consul general there. Although officially "apologizing" for the affair, Morishima minimized its importance.

The Mukden explanation was regarded as "highly provocative" by the American consulate in its report to Washington.

It was after Stimson had been informed of the Mukden "apology" that he demanded "full and immediate satisfaction" from Tokyo. So it was apparent the two nations stood completely at odds over the whole affair.

Diplomatic circles here were inclined to believe the matter was not a closed incident at all in view of the stand taken by the American state department.

Mukden army authorities dismissed the interpreter who took part in the assault upon Chamberlain, but indicated they would release the two sentries involved.

MUKDEN, Jan. 5.—Chinese bandit activities in Manchuria broke out anew today in the vicinity of Helmin, and Japanese troops, aided by airplanes, were rushed from here to conduct a systematic campaign against them.

It was learned forty Chinese were killed and one Japanese officer and four soldiers were wounded in one battle in the area.

BEUTHEN, Upper Silesia, Germany, Jan. 5.—Fourteen miners were entombed by a coal mine explosion near here today. All were believed to have been killed.

FUGITIVES TRACED THROUGH TEXAS AND BORDER IS GUARDED

Leader Discovered In Houston; Identify One Suspect

(BULLETIN)

HOUSTON, Tex., Jan. 5.—Harry and Jennings Young, wholesale killers, came to the end of the trail here today.

Jennings is dead. Harry is dying.

They were believed to have shot themselves to cheat the law of extracting vengeance for the massacre of six possemen at Springfield, Mo., last Saturday.

HOUSTON, Tex., Jan. 5.—Hunted throughout the entire Southwest for the wholesale slaughter of six peace officers, the Young brothers, Missouri bad men, were believed nearing the end of their fugitive trail today.

Their 27-year-old leader, Harry Young, came within a narrow margin of being captured and today was thought hiding somewhere in the vicinity of Houston.

He was believed to be on the verge of starvation and complete exhaustion as thousands of Texas rangers and law enforcement officers of all categories relentlessly hounded him.

Hungry and tired, the hunted killer, it was conjectured, was today ready for the last desperate gamble in his flight, a sudden dash to the Mexican border.

Harry Young's appearance here yesterday afternoon was the only definite clue to the desperadoes whereabouts.

It appeared certain that the young outlaw leader had separated from his brothers, Paul and Jennings, and another supposed accomplice, Charles "Pretty Boy" Floyd, an Oklahoma gunman. Not one hoped for the trail of Paul, Jennings and "Pretty Boy" was in possession of the authorities.

The fugitive, Lieut. Beverly declared, came to the home of his mother-in-law here and asked for his bride of three weeks. Upon learning his wife was not there, he boarded a bus and rode to a suburb on the eastern edge of the city.

The home of Young's mother-in-law and that of his sister-in-law were under heavy guard today.

SPRINGFIELD, Mo., Jan. 5.—The Young brothers, wanted for the massacre of six peace officers had a hitherto unsuspected accomplice in the bloody deed, it was declared today by Detective Ben Bilyeu, one of the survivors of Saturday night's farmhouse battle.

During the fatal siege of the Young farmhouse near here, Bilyeu said he recognized one of the sharpshooters outlaws as Fred Barker, a notorious bandit who is wanted for the killing of Sheriff Roy Kelly during a gun battle in White Plains, Mo.

The other aid was believed to have been Charles "Pretty Boy" Floyd, Oklahoma outlaw who is credited with eleven previous killings.

Although search for the young brothers and their supposed accomplices centered today in Houston, Tex., the efforts of possemen in this vicinity were not relaxed.

The desolate woods and brushlands of the Ozark foothills were combed and all highways were still under heavy patrol.

Authorities continued to question Mrs. Willie Young, mother of the hunted men, their two sisters and another brother, Oscar, but these relatives were able to furnish no information regarding the possible whereabouts of the killers.

A verdict's inquest resulted in the coroner that the six law officers were slain by Harry Young and others unknown.

Three of the victims were buried yesterday, while the entire community paid tribute to their heroism.

The post of Greene County sheriff, rendered vacant by the slaying of Hendrix, today was occupied by his widow. She was sworn into office and immediately took official part in the search for her husband's slayers.

BELIEVE HUNTERS FIRED FATAL SHOT

BRYAN, Oa. Jan. 5.—One of two hunters whose identities are known to Defiance County authorities today were believed to have fired the shot that killed 12-year-old Kathleen Carver at the rear door of a neighbor's farmhouse Sunday afternoon.

Although the men were a mile and a quarter away from the Walter Bender home where the child's body was found dead on the rear door-step, Cloyd King, deputy sheriff of Defiance County, expressed his conviction today that one of the bullets fired by them struck the girl.

HEAVY RAINFALL IN 1931 RECORDED BY XENIA WEATHERMAN

From a meteorological standpoint, the year 1931 was all "wet," that is, compared with the preceding year.

In his annual report, Ernest L. Harner, Xenia weather observer, observes that rainfall during the last twelve months totalled 41.29 inches, as compared with total precipitation of 26.57 inches in 1930. The total snowfall in 1931 was measured at 11.6 inches.

The hottest day of the year was July 16 when temperatures ascended to 106 degrees. The minimum temperature of 9 degrees above zero was recorded on the first day of 1931.

Mr. Harner's observations also summarize weather conditions during December, his report showing the maximum temperature during the month was 68 degrees on December 11, while the coldest day was December 2 when the official reading was 18 degrees. Rainfall during December totalled 3.78 inches, the greatest in any twenty-four-hour period being 1.14 inches on the twenty-second day. Only nine days were clear, one was partly cloudy and twenty-one were cloudy.

Following are the official maximum and minimum temperature readings for each day of December.

DOG LICENSE SALE LAGGING IN COUNTY

Sale of 1932 dog licenses at the office of the county auditor is not progressing at a rate in keeping with the hope of county officials.

Up to and including Monday, only 350 dog and kennel tags for this year had been sold, and a reminder is being issued that owners must procure new licenses for their pets by January 20 if they wish to avoid a dollar penalty assessed for delinquency.

It is estimated that more than 3,500 dogs in the county should be licensed. Last year a total of 2,800 licenses were distributed, this number being about 800 short of the preceding year.

LATE COBBLER IS A PROMISING NEW POTATO

The Late Cobbler is a new potato which may become important in northern Ohio. As the name implies it is a Cobbler which matures somewhat later than the old standard Irish Cobbler. In tests made by John Bushnell, potato specialist at the Ohio Experiment Station, the Late Cobbler has been maturing about two weeks later than the Irish Cobbler, placing it between the early Cobbler and the Russet Rural. In yield it has likewise been intermediate. In most seasons the Irish Cobbler yields poorly at Wooster, whereas the Russet Rural does well. The new Late Cobbler, then, yields better than the Irish Cobbler but not as well as the Russet Rural.

This new variety can hardly be expected to replace the Russet Rural but will be of most value to those growers who wish to grow two or three varieties with a view over a long period. For such growers to spreading harvesting operations, the fact that the Late Cobbler ripens just ahead of the early planted Russet Rural is a decided advantage.

According to the originator, the variety is a selection from the Irish Cobbler. In appearance and cooking quality it cannot be distinguished from the Irish Cobbler; hence it can be sold on the market as a Cobbler. The variety was certified in 1931 for the first time, in New York.

MT. ZION

One of the most beautiful weddings was celebrated at Mt. Zion Church, Tuesday afternoon December 22 at two o'clock. This was the golden wedding of Mr. Daniel H. Hartman and Mrs. Lucy J. Ward Hartman. On December 22, at noon, thirty-three immediate relatives gathered for dinner at 2515 Westfield Ave., Dayton. The out-of-town guests were Mr. Charles Hartman and son Karl of Los Angeles, Cal.; Mr. Horace Hartman of York Pa.; Samuel Hartman of Alpha, Ohio; Rec. Reuben Beaver and family of Akron, Ohio; Walter Hartman and family of Xenia, O.; Dr. J. H. Steele of Massillon, Ohio. The golden wedding cake was beautifully decorated in gold and white.

At two o'clock more than one hundred friends gathered in the Mt. Zion Church for the special service. While the wedding march was played by Miss Etta Marie Kable, the anniversary party slowly marched in from the rear down to the front of the church. Dr. Steele led, while the granddaughter carried a large bouquet of golden chrysanthemums to which were attached two long ribbons of paper held by the twin grandsons. Karl Hartman ushered the aged couple to the chairs prepared for them under a bower of golden and white crepe paper flowers with fifty small golden bells. As climax to the short ceremony the minister conferred upon the couple the honorary degree of happily living together for fifty years. Dr. Steele delivered a very helpful address after which he asked the honor guests to rise. The honor guests were the persons who were present at the wedding Dec. 22 1881. Mrs. Celeste Boyer sang "Silver Threads Among the Gold." "Sabbath Echoes" was played on the clarinet by Ward Daniel Hartman. After extension of greetings, a reception and short program followed in the Sunday School room. Refreshments were served. The white cake had a yellow fifty on the top. The following day a number of friends gathered at the home to extend their greetings. The couple received many beautiful and useful presents. Mr. D. H. Hartman came to Greene County, Ohio from his home in York County, Pa., in December 1877. Mrs. Hartman was born north of Wooster, Ohio. Mr. Hartman worked for Hon. Horace Ankney and Mrs. Hartman lived at the home of Mr. Albert Ankney. At this home the wedding took place December 22, 1881. Mr. Samuel Hartman and Miss Mary Wingertner were married at the same time by Rev. Yockey. The many friends of Mrs. Andrew Cosler of Trebleton are sorry to hear of her serious sickness. Miss Charlotte Hawker fell in the yard at her home Wednesday evening, she was carried in the house and was unconscious for several hours, she remains in a very weak condition. Mr. and Mrs. Hower Cosler and children, Louise Kenneth and Raymond spent Christmas at the home of Mrs. Sarah Kable. The Ladies Aid Society will meet at the home of Mrs. William De-

Bord Thursday afternoon, Jan. 7. The C. E. Society had a New Year watch at the home of Misses Dorothy and Margaret DeBord. Mrs. Lenz and Mr. and Mrs. DeBord entertained the Lenz family at the home of the latter, Christmas Day. Mr. and Mrs. Carl Merrick entertained Miss Pauline Anderson and friend of Akron New Year's Day.

LATE COBBLER IS A PROMISING NEW POTATO

The Late Cobbler is a new potato which may become important in northern Ohio. As the name implies it is a Cobbler which matures somewhat later than the old standard Irish Cobbler. In tests made by John Bushnell, potato specialist at the Ohio Experiment Station, the Late Cobbler has been maturing about two weeks later than the Irish Cobbler, placing it between the early Cobbler and the Russet Rural. In yield it has likewise been intermediate. In most seasons the Irish Cobbler yields poorly at Wooster, whereas the Russet Rural does well. The new Late Cobbler, then, yields better than the Irish Cobbler but not as well as the Russet Rural.

This new variety can hardly be expected to replace the Russet Rural but will be of most value to those growers who wish to grow two or three varieties with a view over a long period. For such growth to spreading harvesting operations, the fact that the Late Cobbler ripens just ahead of the early planted Russet Rural is a decided advantage.

According to the originator, the variety is a selection from the Irish Cobbler. In appearance and cooking quality it cannot be distinguished from the Irish Cobbler; hence it can be sold on the market as a Cobbler. The variety was certified in 1931 for the first time, in New York.

MT. ZION

One of the most beautiful weddings was celebrated at Mt. Zion Church, Tuesday afternoon December 22 at two o'clock. This was the golden wedding of Mr. Daniel H. Hartman and Mrs. Lucy J. Ward Hartman. On December 22, at noon, thirty-three immediate relatives gathered for dinner at 2515 Westfield Ave., Dayton. The out-of-town guests were Mr. Charles Hartman and son Karl of Los Angeles, Cal.; Mr. Horace Hartman of York Pa.; Samuel Hartman of Alpha, Ohio; Rec. Reuben Beaver and family of Akron, Ohio; Walter Hartman and family of Xenia; O. Dr. J. H. Steele of Massillon, Ohio. The golden wedding cake was beautifully decorated in gold and white.

At two o'clock more than one hundred friends gathered in the Mt. Zion Church for the special service. While the wedding march was played by Miss Etta Marie Kable, the anniversary party slowly marched in from the rear down to the front of the church. Dr. Steele led, while the granddaughter carried a large bouquet of golden chrysanthemums to which were attached two long ribbons of paper held by the twin grandsons. Karl Hartman ushered the aged couple to the chairs prepared for them under a bower of golden and white crepe paper flowers with fifty small golden bells. As climax to the short ceremony the minister conferred upon the couple the honorary degree of happily living together for fifty years. Dr. Steele delivered a very helpful address after which he asked the honor guests to rise. The honor guests were ten persons who were present at the wedding Dec. 22 1881. Mrs. Celeste Boyer sang "Silver Threads Among the Gold." "Sabbath Echoes" was played on the clarinet by Ward Daniel Hartman. After extension of greetings, a reception and short program followed in the Sunday School room. Refreshments were served. The white cake had a yellow fifty on the top. The following day a number of friends gathered at the home to extend their greetings. The couple received many beautiful and useful presents. Mr. D. H. Hartman came to Greene County, Ohio from his home in York County, Pa. in December 1877. Mrs. Hartman was born north of Wooster, Ohio. Mr. Hartman worked for Hon. Horace Ankeney and Mrs. Hartman lived at the home of Mr. Albert Ankeney. At this home the wedding took place December 22, 1881. Mr. Samuel Hartman and Miss Mary Wingertner were married at the same time by Rev. Yockey.

The many friends of Mrs. Andrew Cosler of Trebein are sorry to hear of her serious sickness. Miss Charlotte Hawker fell in the yard at her home Wednesday evening, she was carried in the house and was unconscious for several hours, she remains in a very weak condition.

Mr. and Mrs. Hower Cosler and children, Louise Kenneth and Raymond spent Christmas at the home of Mrs. Sarah Kable.

The Ladies Aid Society will meet at the home of Mrs. William De-

Bord Thursday afternoon, Jan. 7.

The C. E. Society had a New Year watch at the home of Misses Dorothy and Margretta DeBord. Mrs. Lenz and Mr. and Mrs. DeBord entertained the Lenz family at the home of the latter, Christmas Day.

Mr. and Mrs. Carl Merrick entertained Miss Pauline Anderson and friend of Akron New Year's Day.

LAL BAGH SOCIETY

HOLDS MEETING MONDAY

The first chapter of the study book, "Christ Comes to the Village," was interestingly reviewed by Mrs. J. T. Charters when members of Lal Bagg Missionary Society of Trinity M. E. Church met at the home of Mrs. George White, Market St., Monday afternoon at 4 o'clock. The meeting opened with a devotional period in charge of Mrs. George Eckerle.

Mrs. Howell Huston sang a solo accompanied by Mrs. W. H. McGervey and Mrs. M. W. Monroe conducted the "mystery box" of questions and answers. Mrs. J. H. Canaday read three letters from missionaries in foreign fields and Mrs. E. A. Rager displayed a poster she had made and gave a short talk on it. Mrs. Harold Owens spoke briefly on the subject, "Stewardship." Mrs. J. J. Stout, vice president, presided at the meeting.

Following the program members enjoyed a covered dish supper at 6 o'clock. The committee in charge of the supper was composed of Mrs. George Bootes, chairman; Mrs. George White, Mrs. Maude Starke, Mrs. Frank Frisette, Mrs. Frank Stryker and Miss Wella Shipley. In the evening members of the society attended revival services at Trinity Church.

Drills for "PAY DIRT" HONOLULU.—Robert Yoshimori, 26, was credited by police with having used an entirely original method in extracting from the safe of Gino Matsumoto, $155 which he coveted. When the latter arrived at his office in the morning his attention was drawn to some shavings under the safe. Investigation proved that the robber had merely turned the box upside down, drilled a hole through the thin bottom and with a screwdriver pulled out the wallet. He replaced the safe in its original position. When police quizzed him on suspicion, Yoshimori confessed.

Edward E. Greiner

Candidate for the Republican Nomination for Congress From the Seventh Ohio Congressional District

EDWARD E. GREINER of Clark County, having entered the contest for the honor of representing the 7th Congressional District in the United States Congress, realizes that the people whom he is asking for support are entitled to know his history, and to have evidence of his ability and purposes to represent them properly.

His training for the past twenty years has been entirely along business lines. He has not been a student of politics. Should he be selected to represent this district, his decisions will be made from a business viewpoint. It may be impossible for him to meet personally everyone he would like to meet, and we are, therefore, by this means, giving you the following facts.

When Mr. Greiner established his own home twelve years ago, he chose the country, having purchased a 68 acre farm in Springfield Township on R. R. No. 5 in Clark County. He is a member of Christ Episcopal church, and has for the past year taught the Senior Boys' Class in Sunday School. He has been married 19 years and has a wife and three daughters.

His business has for the past twenty years been the manufacturing of road-building equipment. What good roads have meant to the entire United States is realized by everyone. The building and maintenance of good roads has been a most important factor in the development of the rural counties.

He has been for the past five years a director and vice-president of the Lagonda-Citizens National Bank, a bank that has faithfully served the farmer, manufacturer, and merchant alike in his community for the period of 58 years.

The transportation of merchandise, mail, and passengers by air will, we believe, develop in the near future into one of the greatest transportation services the world has ever known. Mr. Greiner, having realized this secured through his efforts, the first airport recognized by the government to give complete air service to the seventh congressional district. With his knowledge of aviation, he will support a progressive aviation policy for America.

Mr. Greiner is an ex-service man, having volunteered in June, 1918, although exempt from service due to the fact of having a wife and dependent children. He nevertheless entered the Motor Transport Corps as a private, served overseas with the Army of Occupation, and returned honorably discharged as a First Lieutenant.

Having entered this contest with only one objective, and that is to be a service to his district, and inasmuch as he recognizes that the farming industry is the most important occupation in this district, his efforts to secure proper legislation for the farmer will naturally be foremost in his future work.

He will use his best judgment for the benefit of those whom he represents on questions that are presented in Congress. Guided by his business, industrial, and farm experiences, he will take into consideration conditions as they exist.

He recognizes that great waste exists in governmental operations. DRILLS FOR "PAY DIRT" HONOLULU. — Robert Yoshimori, 20, was credited by police with having used an entirely original method in extracting from the safe of Gino Matsumoto, $155 which he coveted. When the latter arrived at his office in the morning his attention was drawn to some shavings under the safe. Investigation proved that the robber had merely turned the box upside down, drilled a hole through the thin bottom and with a screwdriver pulled out the wallet. He replaced the safe in its original position. When police quizzed him on suspicion, Yoshimori confessed.

Edward E. Greiner
Candidate for the Republican Nomination for Congress
From the Seventh Ohio Congressional District

EDWARD E. GREINER of Clark County, having entered the contest for the honor of representing the 7th Congressional District in the United States Congress, realizes that the people whom he is asking for support are entitled to know his history, and to have evidence of his ability and purposes to represent them properly.

His training for the past twenty years has been entirely along business lines. He has not been a student of politics. Should he be selected to represent this district, his decisions will be made from a business viewpoint. It may be impossible for him to meet personally everyone he would like to meet, and we are, therefore, by this means, giving you the following facts.

When Mr. Greiner established his own home twelve years ago, he chose the country, having purchased a 68 acre farm in Springfield Township on R. R. No. 5 in Clark County. He is a member of Christ Episcopal church, and has for the past year taught the Senior Boys' Class in Sunday School. He has been married 19 years and has a wife and three daughters.

His business has for the past twenty years been the manufacturing of road-building equipment. What good roads have meant to the entire United States is realized by everyone. The building and maintenance of good roads has been a most important factor in the development of the rural counties.

He has been for the past five years a director and vice-president of the Lagonda-Citizens National Bank, a bank that has faithfully served the farmer, manufacturer, and merchant alike in his community for the period of 58 years.

Having entered this contest with only one objective, and that is to be a service to his district, and inasmuch as he recognizes that the farming industry is the most important occupation in this district, his efforts to secure proper legislation for the farmer will naturally be foremost in his future work.

He will use his best judgment for the benefit of those whom he represents on questions that are presented in Congress. Guided by his business, industrial, and farm experiences, he will take into consideration conditions as they exist.

He recognizes that great waste exists in governmental operations. To such waste, he is opposed, and his every effort, insofar as he is able, shall be to obtain the utmost efficiency and economy, so that governmental costs may be reduced, and that the result may be passed on to the taxpayer in reduced taxes.

TEMPERAMENTAL KILAUEA

The recent antics of temperamental Kilauea remind Americans that, among the other biggest things in the world to which they can lay claim, they possess the world's largest volcano. The fact that it lies several thousand miles off their coast, an awesome charm of that Pacific Paradise, Hawaii, ought not to lessen their regard for it.

A fairly well behaved volcano it is, too, as volcanoes go. The principal recorded eruptions from it have been spread over 1789, 1823, 1832, 1840 and 1868. The crater is on the eastern slope of Mauna Loa, which rises out of the island of Hawaii some thirty miles southwest of the City of Hilo—a seismic incision three miles long and two miles wide. The floor of the crater, which is formed by lava streams that constantly flow and cool in one or another part of it, accumulates slowly in periods of moderate activity; but it is liable to fall in or sink at any time, at periods of great volcanic activity especially, when the lava may escape from vents below. At one end of this great volcanic sink is a small lake of boiling lava—Halemaumau, or The House of Everlasting Fire—which has figured in more than one American film, as the final resting place of love-lorn Polynesian belles.

We, who live upon the relatively firma terra of Continental United States, are not in a particularly good position to appreciate the nonchalance with which a reporter files a story from Hilo: "A few earthquakes last night reawakened Kilauea. A new crack developed in the bottom of the 1,000-foot deep fire pit at right angles to the original line of lava fountains." A few earthquakes! A new crack in the earth opening up under one's typewriter! The far-flung possessions of the United States hold thrills which few Americans ever embrace in their entirety.

ADVICE NOT NEEDED

The advice given by the president of the National Student Federation of America to his confederates in Toledo assembled, to "be radical," would seem to be scarcely necessary in this age of challenge and defiance. Youth tends to radicalism, as ducks to water. Our colleges are by no means deficient in radicals. After they graduate and get out into a practical world and acquire experience and possibly a competence, a good many of those who have been radical in their earlier years become conservative. They are content to accept a world they could not remodel nearer to their young heart's desire.

A certain amount of radicalism in certain directions is essential to the progress of civilization. Without it the world would sink into a rut and stay there. All progress, as a matter of fact, comes from challenging things as they are in the interest of a better order. If our Colonial ancestors had been satisfied with the Government of George III and Lord North there would be no United States of America today. If Edison had been content to light himself through life with gas and kerosene, American streets and homes and office buildings would not now be electrically illuminated. If Columbus had accepted the conservative cosmology of his day he would never have headed across the Atlantic to a New World. If Jesus had not rebelled against the theology to which He was born, Christianity would never have come into the world. The radical is a protestant against blindly accepting whatever is as unimprovable.

The danger in radicalism is that those who are imbued may mistake for better what is only newer. That has frequently happened in history. An institution or an idea is not good simply because it is novel or bad simply because it is hoary with tradition or usage. There is a great difference between radicalism and iconoclasm. The latter is purely destructive. The former, as its name implies, attempts to get at the root of things, with a constructive object in mind. That is what makes for progress.

Other Editorial Thoughts

WRAP IT UP

The way the world is being done up in packages is one of the marks of this age. A punster might indeed be tempted to call this the package. Only a little while ago tooth-brushes used to come indiscriminately by the gross. Now arrives that slick invisible wrapping like transparent paper, and articles that never once thought of having a separate covering jump into elegant identity. Cakes, dates, cookies were early to don the all but invisible garb. Next men's shirts and neckties began to wrap themselves up. And what else is to come?

Leave it to eager industry to find out. And yet there are a few things that even ambitious business might overlook. For instance, things that a little sugar coating in the way of a fancy wrapper might help. Such as summer resort bills, hot soup, too-early strawberries, income tax statements, lodge dues, green watermelons, restaurant pie, and various other sundries needing solace.

However urgent may be the quest to wrap things up, it has its regretful limits. Predictions would be rash, but it seems probable some commodities will forever come in their original packages—bulldogs, collar buttons, soda water, turnips, goldfish, railroad tickets, telephone slugs, city directories, tips, coal and spinach, to mention a few.

Various things crave an envelope to give them individuality. Others defy it. The small boy may temporarily be subdued by his Sunday suit, but he is one article that can never successfully be wrapped and sealed. —Christian Science Monitor.

Coalition Government Suggested

By RALPH W. SOCKMAN

Pastor of Madison Avenue Methodist Episcopal Church, New York City

(Ralph Washington Sockman was born in Mt. Vernon, O., Oct. 1, 1889. He is a graduate of Ohio Wesleyan, and has received many honorary degrees. He was intercollegiate secretary of the Y. M. C. A. in 1911, and in 1915 was associate minister of the Madison Avenue M. E. church in New York City. During the World War he served with the Y. M. C. A. He was president of the Federation of Churches and director of the Union Theology seminary. He is now pastor of the Madison Avenue M. E. church. He has written several books on religion, some of which are, "The Revival of the Conventional Life in the Church of England in the Nineteenth Century," "Suburbs of Christianity and Other Sermons," and "Men of the Mysteries.") I suggest a coalition government in the United States as a possible remedy for our political ills. It is a sorry spectacle to see the leaders of our major political parties jockeying for advantage in the race for next year's election when an unparalleled world situation calls for statesmanship which rises above partisanship.

Perhaps we need a coalition government as England did, to lift us out of our petty party strifes. There is a growing mass of intelligent public opinion which is increasingly impatient with worn party slogans and meaningless distinctions.

Whatever the failures of Christianity, it has succeeded sufficiently to create a demand for Christlike honesty and Christlike idealism.

The war system is a cancerous growth which must be cut out of our sick society if a cure is to be effected. It is futile to keep calling for confidence in markets and industry as long as war clouds threaten recurring downpours of destruction. If the year 1932 does not see America take two forward steps against war, it will be held responsible for the next war. Those two steps are entry into the disarmament conference at Geneva.

MY NEW YORK

By JAMES ASWELL

NEW YORK—Marginalia of a Madhattanite:

The fashion in homilies has shifted so that now they are saying, "This is the mildest winter since '88." . . . Excepting a few flurries and squalls the season has been amazingly iceless. Girls who bought those little bobbed fur jackets have been able to wear them through months when they were afraid they'd have the shivers.

That Memphis store which is to sell drugs over the grocery counter, reversing the practice of many drug emporiums, has created ripples felt all the way to Manhattan. . . . Next they'll be vending ginger ale and aspirin in the hardware bazaars. . . . But not all drug stores have branched out. . . . Jarchow's, in lower Second avenue, founded by the first woman pharmacist in the town, sticks firmly—even boastfully—to serums, vaccines, hypodermic syringes and the compounds of mortar and pestle.

"Tobey," the pampered poodle with the $4,000,000 playground, has grown thin and pettish since his mistress, Miss Ella Wendell, died last spring in the strange, shuttered Fifth avenue mansion at which visitors stare, remembering the Nineties. . . . "Tobey," I hear, ate Christmas dinner in the servants' quarters for the first time in his life. . . . Didn't like it much, either. . . . Another victim of reduced circumstances.

CANDOR

A customer in Joe's place, one of the rougher and readier speaks of the Yorkville district, expressed skepticism as to the quality of goods on sale.

"Is this real liquor?" he asked. "Listen!" the bartender said earnestly, leaning across the gleaming mahogany, "more people were killed by that pre-war dynamite than've ever croaked from stuff you get nowadays. Take us here. We just cut the goods enough to make it easy on the stomach."

PUZZLES

John, with his sleek, neatly-divided hair and his eloquent mandolin!

. . . And E. M. Hull, who wrote "The Sheikh" and Of Theda Bara, first of the vamps?

HOP, SKIP AND JUMP

Amateur experts in feminine psychology predicted slight sales for that cruel "truth mirror" which makes mountains of moles and continents of smudges on complexions. . . . They were wrong. . . . The 335 pieces in the Friedsam collection, willed to the Metropolitan, total in value above $10,000,000, or more than $33,000 each an average. Three young women who are studying psychiatry tell me that there is a certain cure for all mental diseases if the patient can be had before the symptoms appear. . . . which leaves me so befuddled that I am on the point of getting a few treatments myself.

Washington has lost a great subject for conversation since Dolly Gann and Alice Longworth made up their social precedence mixup.

The post-holiday sag is noticed on the faces of the crowds. . . . Christmas savings clubs for 1932 are organizing (or is it agonizing?) . . . I discover this column is being run under at least five different headings. . . . A letter from California the other day praised my singing over the radio and asked whether I'd come out and entertain a discussion group. . . . If I sang they'd have a topic to last a year and I'd probably have grapefruit poisoning.

JACK BRINGS DOWN ANOTHER GIANT

Tariff Reduction Slips Out Of Session's Program Due To Divided Control

WASHINGTON—Tariff reduction will not get very far at this session of congress, for two or three reasons.

In the first place, the Democrats, who, generally speaking, consider present rates much too high, control only the house of representatives; not the senate. Secondly, although many folk believe President Hoover to be personally a low tariff man, he presumably would feel bound, as a Republican, to veto downward revision, even if a majority in its favor could be mustered by the combined Jeffersonians and G. O. P. insurgents in Capitol Hill. Thirdly, the Democrats themselves, in the existing state of the world, incline toward reciprocity program in preference to unqualified reduction, and this will take time—more than is likely to be available between now and next spring's congressional adjournment for the national conventions.

However, the urgent necessity for a lowering of tariff walls, as the most important single step (so the Democrats contend) toward the restoration of international trade and prosperity, is sure to be much discussed.

Tariff experts of the Democratic party thus will be much in the foreground as the winter progresses in Washington.

Four of them stand out conspicuously. Senators Cordell Hunt of Tennessee and Edward P. Costigan of Colorado in the upper house of congress; Representatives Henry T. Rainey of Illinois and David J. Lewis of Maryland in the lower one.

Properly, perhaps, the representatives should be named first, since it is in the representatives' chamber that tariff legislation must originate.

Nevertheless, there is a certain justification for heading the list of the great tariff quartet of the Democrats with the name of Senator Hunt, as a statesman who unquestionably would rate high among his party's presidential possibilities but for the pure accident of geographical unavailability, due to dying but not yet thoroughly defunct popular prejudices—ridiculous ones at that, even as prejudices, in the Tennessee case, for his ancestors were on both sides of the struggle of secession.

Incidentally, for the juncture of today, the senator is too dry, but his dryness is part of his geography.

Senator Hull, in brief, is a student of government, of economics and of international trade relationships such as any country is lucky to produce as often as once in a generation.

Republicans as well as Democrats defer both to his judgment and his honesty.

He will be Tennessee's favorite son at the Jeffersonian convention in 1932.

He will not be nominated in first place, of course. As a partisan choice he would be an excellent selection for second place, and not at all an unlikely one, but it would be unfortunate; his voice and his vote are needed in the senate.

With all due respect to the excellent abilities of Congressman James W. Collier, new chairman of the ways and means committee (which frames tariff legislation) in the Democratically organized house of representatives, the ideal individual to direct the task of tariff readjustment would have been Congressman Rainey.

Not counting a two-year break in his record, he would have been chairman, too, as the committee's senior Democratic member.

The misfortune of a single defeat in the Republican landslide of 1920, cost him his rating, and although he was consoled with the Democratic floor leadership (technically a more exalted post), he is not where he is most needed.

True, the Illinois veteran will be a potent influence in the tariff planning of his party.

Indeed, reciprocity was his suggestion first.

Representative Lewis recently returned to congress after a 14-year lapse, during which he had the advantage of a course of intensive experience as a member of the federal tariff commission. He was appointed to it as a tariff expert of the congressional tier. His commissioner's term supplemented the ordinary with practice.

It ended during President Coolidge's administration. The Northamptonian offered to renew it upon conditions which would have required Lewis, a Democrat, to shape his future findings to Republican ideas. Refusing to do so, the Marylander ran for congress again at the earliest opportunity—and won.

Senator Costigan not only was a tariff commission member, he was the commission's chairman. He is a tariff authority of the first magnitude, but not a life-long Democrat. Once, indeed, he was a Republican. In 1912 he followed the Roosevelt bolt. In 1917 President Wilson appointed him to the newly-created tariff board.

"What are you politically, anyway?" the then Senator Charles Curtis of Kansas asked him, when his appointment was submitted for confirmation. "A progressive," said the Coloradoan, "of Republican antecedents and with Democratic consequences." "What a heck of a kind of a Republican!" commented the future vice president, but he voted for confirmation.

Budgets For The Entire Family

By MRS. MARY MORTON

How to Divide the Dollar
IN SPENDING your food budget wisely so as to get the maximum of value for what you spend, especially if you have very little money, divide each dollar like this, if there are children in the family, say food economists:

For milk and cheese 25 cents
For vegetables and fruits 20 to 30 cents
For bread and cereals 15 to 20 cents

For butter, lard or other fats, sugar or molasses 15 to 20 cents
For meat, fish and eggs 15 to 20 cents

A family of adults would need less milk and cheese, and correspondingly more vegetables and fruits. A leaflet issued by the bureau of home economics and the extension service of the United States department of agriculture advises dividing your money thus, into five parts, and spending it for five different kinds of food.

The leaflet emphasizes, "The fewer dollars you have the more important it is to spend wisely. If men and women are to feel well and able to work; if children are to be healthy and able to go to school, they must have enough to food, and they must have the right kinds of food."

Tomorrow the bureau's suggested market orders for the family of five will be given.

POEMS THAT LIVE A GLEE FOR WINTER

Hence, rude Winter! crabbed old fellow,
Never merry, never mellow!
Well-a-day! in rain and snow
What will keep one's heart aglow?
Groups of kinsmen, old and young
Oldest they old friends among;
Groups of friends, so old and true
That they seem our kinsmen, too;
These all merry all together
Charm away chill Winter weather.

Dear old songs for ever new:
Some true love, and laughter, too;
Pleasant wit, and harmless fun,
And a dance when day is done
Music, friends so true and tried,
Whispered love by warm fireside
Mirth at all times all together,
Make sweet May of Winter weather.

What that kill this dull old fellow?
Ale will brighten, and wine that's mellow!
Dear old songs for ever new:
Some true love, and laughter, too;
Pleasant wit, and harmless fun,
And a dance when day is done
Music, friends so true and tried,
Whispered love by warm fireside
Mirth at all times all together,
Make sweet May of Winter weather.

Necessity Of Vitamins

By LOGAN CLENDENING, M. D.

VITAMIN D is necessary for children and particularly so during the winter months. The vitamins are the substances in foods which though small in amount, have a powerful influence on the body's health. Of all the vitamins, the one labelled D is the least likely to be present in familiar food, and will need to be added artificially. The usual way to add it to the diet is to add cod liver oil, which contains large amounts. It prevents the development of rickets.

Cod liver oil also contains another vitamin—the one called A. Vitamin according to investigations, is valuable in building resistance to infections and colds. It is necessary for grown-ups as well as children.

Some authorities have ventured to call Vitamin A the anti-infective vitamin. There seems to be general agreement that when it is absent from diet, increased susceptibility to infection is an early symptom. One of the effects of experimental omission of Vitamin A from the diet is a desquamation of the membrane of the upper respiratory tract. Perhaps it is this condition which favors the development of colds.

Vitamin A is found in milk and eggs. It is not destroyed by the heat of cooking. Under some circumstances the diet may become low in Vitamin A, perhaps due to the food of the animals from which its sources are derived. At any rate, it can always be obtained from cod liver oil. If you want to offer yourself as an experimental animal this winter, see if taking cod liver oil will lower the number of your colds.

QUESTIONS FROM READERS
Mrs. W. E. N.: "I have practical."

ly all aluminum cooking utensils and have not felt any bad effects thus far. Some recent reports have caused me to fear the effects of aluminum. Can you give me any facts on the subject?"

Answer: The aluminum cooking utensil scare is one of the most absurd and fanatical ideas that was ever advanced. There is not one bit of evidence that food cooked in aluminum is harmful or causes any diseases. The correspondent asks for facts. The most important fact is that thousands of people have eaten food cooked in aluminum utensils for many years without experiencing any derangement of health. The aluminum fanatics say it is a cause of cancer. Yet the facts are that cancer occurs among people who have never seen or heard of, let alone used, aluminum, and that there is no high percentage of cancer among those who employ aluminum cooking utensils. Aluminum was not used for the manufacture of cooking utensils until 1892. There was plenty of cancer before that. In 1893 the Hygienic-Chemical Laboratories of Berlin made some experiments in which they watched the health of two men for a year and a half; the food of these men was prepared exclusively in aluminum utensils; the men remained well and gained weight.

A. R.: "How long after a bad breast wound a cancer be likely to start to grow? If, after a year, no certain symptoms are noticeable, could one assume there is no growth?"
Answer: Yes.

Personality All Wrong

By MRS. VIRGINIA LEE

"DEAR VIRGINIA LEE: I make friends easily but I lose them quickly. My mother says she thinks it's my personality.

"Would you please give me some information on a pleasing personality? I would be very grateful to you because I love to have friends and entertain. I'm allowed to go with boys occasionally, but after they go with me a while they drop me gradually. I'm 16.

"TROUBLESOME JERRY."

A pleasing personality is a pleasant personality, Jerry. A girl whose friends always find her one to be relied upon, not up in the air half the time, usually is considered to have one. One who does it "fly off the handle" when aggravating things happen, who is able to take care of her end of the conversation and be jolly and sociable in any gathering, and does not have to be teased and coaxed to do her part in the entertainment of the crowd.

A girl with a "persecution complex," while she may have a nice appearance and charming manner, grows to be a bore in time. So does the one who is grouchy or who wants her own way all the time. In short, the good sport that I am always talking about in this column, is my idea of a pleasing personality.

And I think, my dear, that much of your trouble is on account of your youth and will disappear as you gain poise with age, so don't worry too much about your personality.

"DEAR MISS LEE: I am just another of the vast army of the love-sick writing to you for advice. About two and one-half years ago I met a girl and fell very much in love with her. We got along very nicely for several months before we had an argument. The argument we had was just a foolish lovers' quarrel. It was mostly a case of hurt pride on both sides, but that was our first and last argument.

"DEAR VIRGINIA: I would like to know is it proper to invite a young man to your home, that is, one that has been wanting to date you, but it has been inconvenient for him?

And then you could have a bigger date when you have time off, as you do, do you not? Maybe she will be able to suggest dates that you can keep if she likes you.

"Woolies" Need Care

By GLADYS GLAD

If one can judge from the latest coat and frock models, it's a woolly winter for the well-dressed woman this year. The newest garments have been designed expressly to keep the wearer warm in the zippy weather. And although at the same time they fully preserve their frilly daintiness, they're "woolies," nevertheless. Even woolen undies are coming into vogue again.

To my mind, this means that the problem of offensive odorous perspiration is likely to become more complicated this winter. For it is difficult to keep heavy garments, especially outer clothes, as fresh and clean as light, easily laundered garments. And the girl who is afflicted with excessive perspiration must take care that her dainty "woolies" do not become impregnated with any unpleasant, sweaty odor.

Daily bathing is, of course, absolutely essential for keeping the body fresh and immaculate, and free from any unpleasant odor. But daily bathing often does not prove sufficient to relieve the sufferer from obnoxious perspiration. The local application of a good deodorant is also necessary to help correct this unfortunate irregularity.

There are many excellent deodorants on the market now. Some of them are liquids. Some of them are pastes. Almost all of them are effective. And, unfortunately, most of them are, in the long run, quite expensive.

If you find the marketed deodorants a little too expensive for your regular use, however, there is a cheap and effective remedy that you may employ as a substitute. And that is the plain "rubbing alcohol" that can be obtained in any drug store.

Always, after the bath at night, and in the morning, pour an ample quantity of the rubbing alcohol onto a soft cloth and bathe your arms with it. Apply the alcohol locally to all the parts of the body where the conditions are prevalent.

Because the alcohol is cleansing and closes the pores it often will prevent any odor of perspiration for an entire day. And because of its antiseptic properties, it possesses the added advantage of helping to protect the skin from germ invasion.

ANSWERS TO QUERIES

Weight
John: You are about 10 pounds underweight. I think that a man 20 years of age and 5 feet 7 inches tall should weigh about 140 pounds.

Hands
Mrs. Q.: It is indeed possible to keep the hands soft, smooth and white during the winter season. Full information is contained, along with the home manicuring instructions, in my article on "Care of the Hands and Nails."

M. W.: Sulphur mixed with vaseline forms an excellent remedy for dandruff. The proportions are 60 grains of the sulphur to one ounce of vaseline.

Editor's Note: While it is impossible for Miss Glad to answer beauty questions by mail, she will be happy to send you her pamphlets on "The New Figure" and "Beauty Culture" if you will write her care of this paper, enclosing a stamped self-addressed envelope and ten cents in coin for each to cover cost of printing and handling. For her article on "Care of the Hands and Nails" and "Care of the Feet and Legs," two cents in coin for each and a self-addressed, stamped envelope are required. Personal questions on beauty will be answered through Miss Glad's daily column.

TEMPERAMENTAL KILAUEA

The recent antics of temperamental Kilauea remind Americans that, among the other biggest things in the world to which they can lay claim, they possess the world's largest volcano. The fact that it lies several thousand miles off their coast, an awesome charm of that Pacific Paradise, Hawaii, ought not to lessen their regard for it.

A fairly well behaved volcano it is, too, as volcanoes go. The principal recorded eruptions from it have been spread over 1789, 1823, 1832, 1840 and 1888. The crater is on the eastern slope of Mauna Loa, which rises out of the island of Hawaii some thirty miles southwest of the City of Hilo—a seismic incision three miles long and two miles wide. The floor of the crater, which is formed by lava streams that constantly flow and cool in one or another part of it, accumulates slowly in periods of moderate activity; but it is liable to fall in or sink at any time, at periods of great volcanic activity especially, when the lava may escape from vents below. At one end of this great volcanic sink is a small lake of boiling lava—Halemaumau, or The House of Everlasting Fire—which has figured in more than one American film, as the final resting place of love-lorn Polynesian belles.

We, who live upon the relatively firm terra of Continental United States, are not in a particularly good position to appreciate the nonchalance with which a reporter files a story from Hilo: "A few earthquakes last night reawakened Kilauea. A new crack developed in the bottom of the 1,000-foot deep fire pit at right angles to the original line of lava fountains." A few earthquakes! A new crack in the earth opening up under one's typewriter! The far-flung possessions of the United States hold thrills which few Americans ever embrace in their entirety.

ADVICE NOT NEEDED

The advice given by the president of the National Student Federation of America to his confederates in Toledo assembled, to "be radical," would seem to be scarcely necessary in this age of challenge and defiance. Youth tends to radicalism, as ducks to water. Our colleges are by no means deficient in radicals. After they graduate and get out into a practical world and acquire experience and possibly a competence, a good many of those who have been radical in their earlier years become conservative. They are content to accept a world they could not remold nearer to their young heart's desire.

A certain amount of radicalism in certain directions is essential to the progress of civilization. Without it the world would sink into a rut and stay there. All progress, as a matter of fact, comes from challenging things as they are in the interest of a better order. If our Colonial ancestors had been satisfied with the Government of George III and Lord North there would be no United States of America today. If Edison had been content to light himself through life with gas and kerosene, American streets and homes and office buildings would not now be electrically illuminated. If Columbus had accepted the conservative cosmology of his day he would never have headed across the Atlantic to a New World. If Jesus had not rebelled against the theology to which He was born, Christianity would never have come into the world. The radical is a protestant against blindly accepting whatever is as unimprovable.

The danger in radicalism is that those who are imbued may mistake for better what is only newer. That has frequently happened in history. An institution or an idea is not good simply because it is novel or bad simply because it is hoary with tradition or usage. There is a great difference between radicalism and iconoclasm. The latter is purely destructive. The former, as its name implies, attempts to get at the root of things, with a constructive object in mind. That is what makes for progress.

Other Editorial Thoughts

WRAP IT UP

The way the world is being done up in packages is one of the marks of this age. A punster might indeed be tempted to call this the package age. Only a little while ago tooth-brushes used to come indiscriminately by the gross. Now arrives that slick invisible wrapping like transparent paper, and articles that never once thought of having a separate covering jump into elegant identity. Cakes, dates, cookies were early to do the all but invisible garb. Next men's shirts and neckties began to wrap themselves up. And what else is to come?

Leave it to eager industry to find out. And yet there are a few things that even ambitious business might overlook. For instance, things that a little sugar coating in the way of a fancy wrapper might help. Such as summer resort bills, hot soup, too-early strawberries, income tax statements, lodge dues, green watermelons, restaurant pie, and various other sundries needing solace.

However urgent may be the quest to wrap things up, it has its regretful limits. Predictions would be rash, but it seems probable some commodities will forever come in their original packages—bulldogs, collar buttons, soda water, furnaces, goldfish, railroad tickets, telephone slugs, city directories, tips, coal and spinach, to mention a few.

Various things crave an envelope to give them individuality. Others defy it. The small boy may temporarily be subdued by his Sunday suit, but he is one article that can never successfully be wrapped and sealed. —Christian Science Monitor.

Coalition Government Suggested

By RALPH W. SOCKMAN

Pastor of Madison Avenue Methodist Episcopal Church, New York City

(Ralph Washington Sockman was born in Mt. Vernon, O., Oct. 1, 1889. He is a graduate of Ohio Wesleyan, and has received many honorary degrees. He was intercollegiate secretary of the Y. M. C. A. in 1911, and in 1915 was associate minister of the Madison Avenue M. E. church in New York City. During the World War he served with the Y. M. C. A. He was president of the Federation of Churches and director of the Union Theology seminary. He is now pastor of the Madison Avenue M. E. church. He has written several books on religion, some of which are, "The Revival of the Conventional Life in the Church of England in the Nineteenth Century," "Suburbs of Christianity and Other Sermons," and "Men of the Mysteries.") I suggest a coalition government in the United States as a possible remedy for our political ills. It is a sorry spectacle to see the leaders of our major political parties jockeying for advantage in the race for next year's election when an unparalleled world situation calls for statesmanship which rises above partisanship.

Perhaps we need a coalition government as England did, to lift us out of our petty party strifes.

There is a growing mass of intelligent public opinion which is increasingly impatient with worn party slogans and meaningless distinctions.

Whatever the failures of Christianity, it has succeeded sufficiently to create a demand for Christlike honesty and Christlike idealism.

The war system is a cancerous growth which must be cut out of our sick society if a cure is to be effected. It is futile to keep calling for confidence in markets and industry as long as war clouds threaten recurring downpours of destruction. If the year 1932 does not see America take two forward steps against war, it will be held responsible for the next war. Those two steps are entry into the World court and leadership in the disarmament conference at Geneva.

Senator Hull, in brief, is a student of government, of economics and of international trade relations such as any country is lucky to produce as often as once in a generation.

Republicans as well as Democrats defer both to his judgment and his honesty.

He will be Tennessee's favorite son at the Jeffersonian convention in 1932.

He will not be nominated in first place, of course. As a partisan choice he would be an excellent selection for second place, and not at all an unlikely one, but it would be unfortunate; his voice and his vote are needed in the senate.

With all due respect to the excellent abilities of Congressmen James W. Collier, new chairman of the ways and means committee (which frames tariff legislation) in the Democratically organized house of representatives, the ideal individual to direct the task of tariff readjustment would have been Congressman Rainey.

Not counting a two-year break in his record, he would have been chairman, too, as the committee's senior Democratic member.

The misfortune of a single defeat, in the Republican landslide of 1920, cost him his rating, and although he was consoled with the Democratic floor leadership (technically a more exalted post), he is not where he is most needed.

True, the Illinois veteran will be a potent influence in the tariff planning of his party.

Indeed, reciprocity was his suggestion first.

Representative Lewis recently returned to congress after a 14-year lapse, during which he had the advantage of a course of intensive experience as a member of the federal tariff commission. He was appointed to it as a tariff expert of the congressional type. His commissioner's term supplemented the one with practice.

It ended during President Coolidge's administration.

The Northampton offered to renew it upon conditions which would have required Lewis, a Democrat, to shape his future findings to Republican ideas. Refusing to do so, the Marylander ran for congress again at the earliest opportunity—and won.

Senator Costigan not only was the commission's chairman. He is a tariff authority of the first magnitude, but not a life-long Democrat. Once, indeed, he was a Republican. In 1912 he followed the Roosevelt bolt. In 1917 President Wilson appointed him to the newly-created tariff board.

"What are you politically, anyway?" the then Senator Charles Curtis of Kansas asked him, when his appointment was submitted for confirmation. "A progressive," said the Coloradan, "of Republican antecedents and with Democratic consequences." "What a heck of a kind of a Republican!" commented the future vice president, but he voted for confirmation.

Budgets For The Entire Family

By MRS. MARY MORTON

How to Divide the Dollar IN SPENDING your food budget wisely so as to get the maximum of value for what you spend, especially if you have very little money, divide each dollar like this. If there are children in the family, say food economists:

For milk and cheese 25 cents
For vegetables and fruits 20 to 30 cents
For bread and cereals 15 to 20 cents

For butter, lard or other fats, sugar or molasses 15 to 20 cents
For meat, fish and eggs 15 to 20 cents

A family of adults would need less milk and cheese, and correspondingly more vegetables and fruits. A leaflet issued by the bureau of home economics and the extension service of the United States department of agriculture divides your money thus, into five parts, and spending it for five different kinds of food.

The leaflet emphasizes, "The fewer dollars you have the more important it is to spend wisely. If men and women are to feel well and able to work; if children are to be healthy and able to go to school, they must have enough food and they must have the right kind of food."

Tomorrow the bureau's suggested market orders for the family of five will be given.

POEMS THAT LIVE

A GLEE FOR WINTER

Hence, rude Winter! crabbed old fellow, Never merry, never mellow! Well-a-day! in rain and snow What will keep one's heart aglow? Groups of kinsmen, old and young Oldest their old friends among; Groups of friends, so old and true That they seem our kinsmen, too! These all merry all together, Charm away chill Winter weather.

What will kill this dull old fellow? Ale that's bright, and wine that's mellow! Dear old songs for ever new; Some true love, and laughter, too; Pleasant wit, and harmless fun, And a dance when day is done, Music, friends so true and tried, Whispered love by warm fireside, Mirth at all times all together, Make sweet May of Winter weather.

I believe in growth, I believe in evolution. But sometimes I think that evolution moves in jerks and starts, in fits and starts. And when we lose faith, we are in the trough of the wave and all we see around us is the cold and unfriendly waters—and we do not know that even as we complain we are rising to the very tip of some great wave that will give us our first breath-taking glimpse of the loveliest land we have ever known.

They rose in terrible wrath. . . . We feebly complain. They gave to the hungry man who came to their back doors.

—Alfred Domett (1811-1887)

Necessity Of Vitamins

By LOGAN CLENDENING, M. D.

VITAMIN D is necessary for children and particularly so during the winter months. The vitamins are the substances in foods which though small in amount, have a powerful influence on the body's health. Of all the vitamins, the one labelled D is the least likely to be present in familiar food, and will need to be added artificially. The usual way to add it to the diet is to add cod liver oil, which contains large amounts. It prevents the development of rickets.

Cod liver oil also contains another vitamin—the one called A. Vitamin according to investigations, is valuable in building resistance to infections and colds. It is necessary for grown-ups as well as children.

Some authorities have ventured to call Vitamin A the anti-infective vitamin. There seems to be general agreement that when it is absent from diet, increased susceptibility to infection is an early symptom. One of the effects of experimental omission of Vitamin A from the diet is a desquamation of the membrane of the upper respiratory tract. Perhaps it is this condition which favors the development of colds.

Vitamin A is found in milk and eggs. It is not destroyed by the heat of cooking. Under some circumstances the diet may become low in Vitamin A, perhaps due to the food of the animals from which its sources are derived. At any rate, it can always be obtained from cod liver oil. If you want to offer your child as an experimental animal this winter, see if taking cod liver oil will lower the number of your colds.

QUESTIONS FROM READERS
Mrs. W. E. N.: "I have practical."

ly all aluminum cooking utensils and we have not felt any bad effects thus far. Some recent reports have caused me to fear the effects of aluminum. Can you give me any facts on the subject?"

Answer: The aluminum cooking utensil scare is one of the most absurd and fanatical ideas that was ever advanced. There is not one bit of evidence that food cooked in aluminum is harmful or causes any diseases. The correspondent asks for facts. The most important fact is that thousands of people have eaten food cooked in aluminum utensils for many years without experiencing any derangement of health. The aluminum fanatics say it is a cause of cancer. Yet the facts are that cancer occurs among people who have never seen or heard of, let alone used, aluminum, and that there is no high percentage of cancer among those who employ aluminum cooking utensils. Aluminum was not used for the manufacture of cooking utensils until 1892. There was plenty of cancer before that. In 1893 the Hygienic-Chemical Laboratories of the Friedrich-Wilhelm Institute of Berlin made some experiments in which they watched the health of two men for a year and a half; the food of these men was prepared exclusively in aluminum utensils; the men remained well and gained weight.

A. R.: "How long after a blow to the breast would a cancer be likely to start to grow? If, after a year, no certain symptoms are noticeable, could one assume there is no growth?"

Answer: Yes.

Personality All Wrong

By MRS. VIRGINIA LEE

"DEAR VIRGINIA LEE: I make friends easily but I lose them quickly. My mother says she thinks it's my personality."

"Would you please give me some information on a pleasing personality? I would be very grateful to you because I love to have friends and entertain. I'm allowed to go with boys occasionally, but after they go with me a while they drop me gradually. I'm 16."

"TROUBLE SOME JERRY." A pleasing personality is a pleasant personality, Jerry. A girl whose friends always find her one to be relied upon, not up in the air half the time, usually is considered to have one. One who does "fly off the handle" when aggravating things happen, who is able to take care of her end of the conversation and be jolly and sociable in any gathering, and does not have to be teased and coaxed to do her part in the entertainment of the crowd.

A girl with a "persecution complex," while she may have a nice appearance and charming manner, grows to be a bore in time. So does the one who is grouchy or who wants her own way all the time. In short, the good sport that I am always talking about in this column, is my idea of a pleasing personality.

And I think, my dear, that much of your trouble is on account of your youth and will disappear as you gain poise with age, so don't worry too much about your personality.

"DEAR MISS LEE: I am just another of the vast army of the love-sick writing to you for advice. About two and one-half years ago I met a girl and fell very much in love with her. We got along very nicely for several months before we had an argument. The argument was just a foolish quarrel. It was mostly a case of hurt pride on both sides but that was our first and last argument."

And then you could have a bigger date when you have time off, as you do, do you not? Maybe she will be able to suggest dates that you can keep if she likes you.

"DEAR VIRGINIA: I would like to know is it proper to invite a man to your home, that is, one that has been wanting to date you, but it has been inconvenient for him?"

"Woolies" Need Care

By GLADYS GLAD

If one can judge from the latest coat and frock models, it's a woolly winter for the well-dressed woman this year. The newest garments have been designed expressly to keep the wearer warm in the zippiest weather. And although at the same time they fully preserve their frailty daintiness, they're "woolies," nevertheless. Even woolen undies are coming into vogue again.

To my mind, this means that the problem of offensive odoriferous perspiration is likely to become more complicated this winter. For it is difficult to keep heavy garments, especially outer clothes, as fresh and clean as light, easily laundered garments. And the girl who is afflicted with excessive perspiration must take care that her dainty "woolies" do not become impregnated with any unpleasant, sweaty odor.

Daily bathing is, of course, absolutely essential for keeping the body fresh and immaculate, and free from any unpleasant odor. But daily bathing often does not prove sufficient to relieve the sufferer from obnoxious perspiration. The local application of a good deodorant is also necessary to help correct this unfortunate irregularity.

There are many excellent deodorants on the market now. Some of them are liquids. Some of them are pastes. Almost all of them are effective. And, unfortunately, most of them are, in the long run, quite expensive.

If you find the marketed deodorants a little too expensive for your regular use, however, there is a cheap and effective remedy that you may employ as a substitute. And that is the plain "rubbing alcohol" that can be obtained in any drug store.

Always after the bath at night, and in the morning, pour an ample quantity of the rubbing alcohol onto a soft cloth and bathe your arms with it. Apply the alcohol locally to all the parts of the body where the conditions are prevalent. Because the alcohol is cleansing and closes the pores it often will prevent any odor of perspiration for an entire day. And because of its astringent properties, it possesses the added advantage of helping to protect the skin from germ invasion.

ANSWERS TO QUERIES

Weight
John: You are about 10 pounds underweight. I think that a man 20 years of age and 5 feet 7 inches tall should weigh about 140 pounds.

Hands
Mrs. Q.: It is indeed possible to keep the hands soft, smooth and white during the winter season. Full information is contained, along with the home manicuring instructions, in my article on "Care of the Hands and Nails."

M. W.: Sulphur mixed with vaseline forms an excellent remedy for dandruff. The proportions are 60 grains of the sulphur to one ounce of vaseline.

Editor's Note: While it is impossible for Miss Glad to answer beauty questions by mail, she will be happy to send you her pamphlet on "The New Figure" and "Beauty Culture" if you will write her care of this paper, enclosing a stamped, self-addressed envelope and ten cents in coin for each, to cover cost of printing and handling. For her article on "Care of the Hands and Nails" and "Care of the Feet and Legs," two cents in coin for each, and a self-addressed, stamped envelope are required. Personal questions on beauty will be answered through Miss Glad's daily column.

SPORT SNAP SHOTS

FRAMED
by Phil

This department may be speaking out of turn, but it has adopted a platform. If you think we (this is an editorial we) are going into politics, you are mistaken. Rather than hold you in suspense any longer, our platform is this: we intend to foster a campaign to end support of a movement to have basketball games staged at Central gymnasium decided so decisively one way or the other, that there can be no room for argument.

Our pet project, as we see it, has many advantages which outnumber the disadvantages. Either let the Blues win by a large score, or permit the visiting team to win by a big margin. No more close scores. A large margin will tend to dishearten the team that is far behind, and will presumably have the same effect on the fans who support the team that is getting a sound spanking.

This condition will have a corresponding reaction as far as the rival teams and spectators are concerned. There will be little or no excitement to speak of. Both teams will lose interest in the game and so will the crowd. There will be slight danger of the play becoming rough, because the players won't care any longer. The calm stillness of the night will pervade the gymnasium. Quietude will reign supreme. All will be peaceful along the Potomac.

There appears to be a general agreement, as we get it second hand, that the unfortunate events that this department hears trending toward the close of the Xenia-Withrow game Saturday night may be indirectly or directly attributed to the fact the contest grew exceptionally rough and got beyond the control of the official. (That's right, blame the official.)

Be that as it may, the incentive to win is the predominating factor in attracting interest in all games of sport and crowds. Without this magnet no form of athletics could long endure. Close basketball games create intense rivalry among players. This rivalry arouses the ardor of fans, often to fever pitch.

It is perhaps inevitable that when the score is close and the game is nearly over, a contest, particularly if played on a small floor, will become rough. The floor at Central gym is small and bodily contact is necessarily frequent.

It takes a capable official—one endowed with unusual ability—to keep the roughness down to a minimum. Some officials have not the slightest hesitancy in calling fouls at random in order to keep the game well in hand. Others permit the play to become a free for all scramble.

When this occurs, the players might just as well don boxing gloves and have a battle royal, for the contest loses all semblance of a basketball game.

Bowling

The Recreation Bowling League scramble would be a great race if those Red Wings weren't so "high hat." After an enforced vacation of two weeks owing to the holidays, match play was resumed in the league Monday night. But it was the same old story. The league-leading Red Wings, not content with a nine-game lead, increased their margin to ten games by winning the odd game in three from the Krippendorfs.

Krippendorfs, after losing the first two, won the last game largely because Howard Brickell rolled a big single game of 264. Brickell had a three-game series of 627. Another high single game was recorded in the first game by Jess Anderson of the Red Wings, who rolled 257 and wound up with a total of 629 for the evening. Earl Gannon, of the same team, bowled 603. The winners collected 2,805 pins. Box score:

OHIO STATE LOSES FROSH ATHLETES

COLUMBUS, O., Jan. 5.—Ohio State today was made aware of its freshmen athletes who were being counted on to help the Buckeye football team next fall, one via the low grade route and one voluntarily.

John Heller, outstanding freshman halfback from Dayton Stivers withdrew from college because of low grades, while Bernert Desher, former Columbus Central star halfback, and also a stellar backfield man on the Ohio State freshman team, withdrew voluntarily.

Bill Diehl, varsity football player and expert swimmer became ineligible for athletics because of low grades, but will remain in school. He was a member of the varsity tank team.

SUCCEEDS FATHER

J. KNOX MONTGOMERY JR.

J. Knox Montgomery, Jr., who has been elected vice-president and acting head of the executive committee of the board of trustees, is the eldest son of the late president, Dr. John Knox Montgomery.

Mr. Montgomery has been executive secretary of the college since Sept. and will be head of the institution until a new president is elected by the governing board. He is 39 years of age, his birthday having been December 30, the date on which his father died.

A graduate of Muskingum College in the class of 1914, Knox Montgomery, entered Y. M. C. A. work and has held secretary positions in Cleveland, Van Wert, Kankakee, Ill., and Butler, Pa. For the past seven years he served as general secretary at Butler, where he came into prominence through inaugurating the Y. M. C. A. religious clinic, which has been adopted by many organizations of the association throughout the country.

Having served in an executive capacity at Muskingum during the past four months, Mr. Montgomery is familiar with the needs and program of the institution, and is ably qualified for the administrative duties of the office.

DE GRAFF HIGH WINS FROM HOME CADETS ON SATURDAY NIGHT

Score 19-7 Victory; Home Juniors Win And Lose Games

DeGraff High School, of Logan County, with two sets of brothers in its lineup, scored a 31 to 16 victory over the O. S. and S. O. Home quintet of Xenia on the DeGraff floor Saturday night. The cadet cagers were unable to cope with the basket-shooting of J. Madden, guard, and Hall, forward, particular the latter player, an all-Class B sectional forward for two years, who tallied twelve points.

A preliminary game resulted in a 19 to 7 defeat for the Home Gruffs' team, which played the DeGraff feminine sextet.

The Home junior high court team split even in two basketball engagements last week, losing to Xenia Central juniors, 10 to 8, Thursday, and beating Cedarville juniors, 28 to 9, Saturday afternoon, both games being played on the armory floor.

The Home boys' and girls' teams and the junior five will play a triple-header with Bath Twp. High teams at Osborn Friday night this week. The Home varsity's first home contest is scheduled for Saturday night with Otterbein Home, with the reserve teams clashing in a preliminary. Lineups of the Home-DeGraff contest:

STATE STILL LEADS BIG TEN COURT RACE

CHICAGO, Jan. 5.—Northwestern, Ohio State and Purdue led the big ten conference basketball race today. The season officially opened last night with six teams participating.

At Evanston the Wildcats slashed their way through an overtime period to eke out a 31 to 30 victory over Wisconsin.

Joe Reiff, high scorer in the big ten last year, counted 12 of the Northwestern points.

Purdue had little trouble winning from Indiana 49 to 30.

At Champaign, Ohio State gave fair notice that it is out to vindicate the disastrous season of last year. The Buckeyes whipped Illinois 23 to 28.

WOMAN BRIDGE STAR ANALYZES PLAY IN CONTRACT TOURNEY

Mrs. Ely Culbertson
Blames System For
Lenz Showing

(Editor's Note: Written expressly for International News Service by Josephine Culbertson, wife of Ely Culbertson and with him originator of the approach-forcing system of contract bidding.)

By JOSEPHINE CULBERTSON
World's Greatest Woman Bridge Player.
(Copyright, 1932, by I. N. S.)

NEW YORK, Jan. 5.—The bridge battle of the century, as Ely calls it, the match of 150 rubbers with Mr. Sidney S. Lenz and his partners, to test the merits of the approach-forcing and official systems of contract bidding, will end Friday. Today there remain only twenty-one rubbers to be played.

After last night's session I shall take a short vacation from play, returning however, to the bridge table Friday night to play the final session with Ely as my partner. When this match was arranged, I had agreed to play only seventy-five rubbers.

That number today had been passed, but my husband is such a romanticist that he insisted that I play the last session as the first with him.

I have been so interested in the demonstration of the accuracy of the approach-forcing system of bidding that I was willing to devote more time to the match than I had expected to do at the beginning.

An accurate count of the aces and kings held disclosed that the high cards held by the opposing sides had been about even.

The matter of distribution which plays a very large part in the success or failure of contracts at the bridge table, has, if anything, favored our opponents, and yet we are 16,835 points ahead, due, as I firmly believe, to the fact that we used the better system of bidding.

This might make it appear that our opponents had played badly. That is not so.

As a player and in analyzing the hands, I have watched with keen admiration the play of all three of my opponents—Mr. Lenz, Mr. Oswald Jacoby and Commander Winfield Liggett, Jr. They have lived up to their reputation as brilliant and accurate players. In view of this, the results speak for themselves.

As much cannot be said for the system of bidding used by them, however. Observe, for instance, hand No. 742, played in the 124th rubber, which, as a result of the official system bidding, cost our opponents an easily makeable vulnerable small slam. The hand and bidding follow:

South—Dealer.
Both sides vulnerable.
NORTH
Mr. Lenz
S—A K
H—K A J 7
D—A J 9
C—A K Q 8 3

WEST
Culbertson
S—7 5
H—K 9 5 4 3
D—Q 7 4 3
C—10 4

EAST
Mrs. Culbertson
S—J 6 4 3 2
H—8
D—10 8 6 2
C—9 7 5

The bidding:
South West North East
Pass Pass 3 NT Pass

Had the approach-forcing system been used, Mr. Lenz's opening bid would have been two clubs. Commander Liggett, who holds 1½ honors tricks, and using the approach-forcing system would know that his partner held a minimum of five honors-tricks, would respond with three notrump. North would then bid four clubs to show a re-biddable suit, and be perfectly safe in this course, as his partner could not pass until a game had been contracted for.

The final result would have been a contract of six notrump, as south, after the clubs are rebid, would raise to five clubs, and north, with 6 honors-tricks and from 8 to 9 play-clubs, assured in his own hand and the knowledge that his partner holds at least 1½ honors-tricks, would certainly bid six notrump.

The sixth rubber of the evening was notable through the fact that all of the six hands were played at doubled contracts, and two of these doubled contracts resulted in games for our opponents.

The final hand of the rubber was an especially unfortunate one from our standpoint because the fates which watch over distribution had made every finesse to order for Mr. Lenz, who was playing a contract five diamonds doubled by Ely. If his finesses in hearts and diamonds lost instead of won, then instead of making a doubled contract he would have been defeated 600 to 1,000 points.

Tonight my husband will have a new partner, but one who will, I feel sure, acquit himself with credit. Mr. Michael T. Gottlieb, a member of the New York Bridge Club and one of the world's ranking players, will play this session. He is a new member of the bridge world contract team-of-four, and this is his first appearance in that capacity. I wish him lots of luck. I know he will bid and play with consummate skill.

Experts Select Them for All-American Eleven

These gridiron warriors have reached the height of every footballer's ambition: they have been named for the mythical All-American team. Outstanding stars in their positions the eleven represent the cream of America's football talent. This team was picked by sports experts of the Hearst newspapers in all parts of the country, assisted by leading coaches. All have made history on the gridiron this season and, as the curtain drops, can look back with pride to the records they leave to their Alma Mater. For several it means goodbye to intercollegiate football owing to graduation but undoubtedly some of them will be heard from again on professional teams or as coaches.

SOCIAL FALDERALS TARGET OF PASTOR AT REVIVAL HERE

"Young people are being reared for social falderals when in reality they are going down in sin," declared the Rev. C. A. Hutchison, pastor of the M. E. Church, Cedarville, when he spoke at revival services at Trinity M. E. Church Monday evening. Dr. Hutchison preached to a large audience on the subject, "The Secret of Victory."

"Righteousness in the souls of people is fundamental to health and prosperity. People today are cowards just as they were in Gideon's days. They resist goodness for evil and raise their boys and girls for social falderals, thinking that will make them successful while at the same time the boys and girls are having a good time in the eyes of the world yet going down in sin," the Rev. Mr. Hutchison declared.

"Friends may be perfectly competent to swing a club or a social affair but have you ever spoken to a soul about his eternal welfare?" the Rev. Mr. Hutchison continued.

"Today people say, 'God is with us. How can they say God is with us in time of such a spiritual depression as this?'"

Dr. Hutchison further condemned the Christian lethargy and timidity today in the face of a bold, sinful world.

Special music was furnished by the Sunday School Orchestra which will play at each of the services. Dr. Hutchison will speak on "The Keys to the Kingdom" at Tuesday night's services, starting at 7:30 o'clock.

This department may be speaking out of turn, but it has adopted a platform. If you think we (this is an editorial we) are going into politics, you are mistaken. Rather than hold you in suspense any longer, our platform is this: we intend to foster a campaign to enlist support of a movement to have basketball games staged at Central gymnasium decided so decisively one way or the other, that there can be no room for argument.

Our pet project, as we see it, has many advantages which outnumber the disadvantages. Either let the Bucs win by a large score, or permit the visiting team to win by a big margin. No more close scores. A large margin will tend to dishearten the team that is far behind, and will presumably have the same effect on the fans who support the team that is getting a sound spanking.

This condition will have a corresponding reaction as far as the rival teams and spectators are concerned. There will be little or no excitement to speak of. Both teams will lose interest in the game and so will the crowd. There will be slight danger of the play becoming rough, because the players won't care any longer. The calm stillness of the night will pervade the gymnasium. Quietude will reign supreme. All will be peaceful along the Potomac.

There appears to be a general agreement, as we get it second hand, that the unfortunate events that this department has transpired toward the close of the Xenia-Withrow game Saturday night may be indirectly or directly attributed to the fact the contest grew exceptionally rough and beyond the control of the official. (That's right, blame the official.)

Be that as it may, the incentive to win is the predominating factor in attracting interest in all games of sport and crowds. Without this magnet no form of athletics could long endure. Close basketball games create intense rivalry among players. This rivalry arouses the ardor of fans, often to fever pitch.

It is perhaps inevitable that when the score is close and the game is nearly over, a contest, particularly if played on a small floor, will become rough. The floor at Central gym is small and bodily contact is necessarily frequent.

It takes a capable official—one endowed with unusual ability—to keep the roughness down to a minimum. Some officials have not the slightest hesitancy in calling fouls at random in order to keep the game well in hand. Others permit the play to become a free for all scramble.

When this occurs, the players might just as well don boxing gloves and have a battle royal, for the contest loses all semblance of a basketball game.

Bowling

The Recreation Bowling League scramble would be a great race if those Red Wings weren't so "high hat." After an enforced vacation of two weeks owing to the holidays, match play was resumed in the league Monday night. But it was the same old story. The league-leading Red Wings, not content with a nine-game lead, increased their margin to ten games by winning the odd game in three from the Krippendorf Shoes.

Krippendorf, after losing the first two, won the last game largely because Howard Brickel rolled a big single game of 264. Brickel has a three-game series of 627. Another high single score was recorded in the first game by Jess Anderson, of the Red Wings, who rolled 257 and wound up with a total of 629 for the evening. Earl Gannon, of the same team, bowled 603. The winners collected 2,805 pins. Box score:

OHIO STATE LOSES
FROSH ATHLETES

COLUMBUS, O., Jan. 5.—Ohio State today was minus two of its freshmen athletes who were being counted on to help the Buckeye football team next fall, one via the low grade route and one voluntarily.

John Heller, outstanding freshman halfback from Dayton Stivers withdrew from college because of low grades, while Bernet Deshler, former Columbus Central star halfback, and also a stellar backfield man on the Ohio State freshman team, withdrew voluntarily.

Bill Diehl, varsity football player and expert swimmer became ineligible for athletics because of low grades, but will remain in school. He was member of the varsity tank team.

SUCCEEDS FATHER

J. KNOX MONTGOMERY JR.

J. Knox Montgomery, Jr., who has been elected vice-president and acting head of Muskingum College, by action of the executive committee of the board of trustees, is the eldest son of the late president, Dr. John Knox Montgomery.

Mr. Montgomery has been executive secretary of the college since Sept. and will be head of the institution until a new president is elected by the governing board. He is 39 years of age, his birthday having been December 30, the date on which his father died.

A graduate of Muskingum College in the class of 1914, Knox Montgomery, entered Y. M. C. A. work and has held secretary positions in Cleveland, Van Wert, Kanakake, Ill., and Butler, Pa. For the past seven years he served as general secretary at Butler, where he came into prominence through inaugurating the Y. M. C. A. religious clinic, which has been adopted by many organizations of the association throughout the country.

Having served in an executive capacity at Muskingum during the past four months, Mr. Montgomery is familiar with the needs and program of the institution, and is ably qualified for the administrative duties of the office.

DE GRAFF HIGH WINS
FROM HOME CADETS
ON SATURDAY NIGHT

Score 19-7 Victory; Home Juniors Win And Lose Games

DeGraff High School, of Logan County, with two sets of brothers in its lineup, scored a 31 to 16 victory over the O. S. and S. O. Home quintet of Xenia on the DeGraff floor Saturday night. The cadet cagers were unable to cope with the basketballing of J. Madden, guard, and Hall, forward, particularly the latter player, an All-Class B sectional forward for two years, who tallied twelve points.

A preliminary game resulted in a 19 to 7 defeat for the Home girls' team, which played the DeGraff feminine sextet.

The Home junior high court team split even in two basketball engagements last week, losing to Xenia Central Juniors, 10 to 8, Thursday, and beating Cedarville Juniors, 28 to 9, Saturday afternoon, both games being played on the armory floor.

The Home boys' and girls' teams and the junior five will play a triple-header with Bath Twp. High teams at Osborn Friday night this week. The Home varsity's first home contest is scheduled for Saturday night with Otterbein Home, with the reserve teams clashing in a preliminary. Lineups of the Home-DeGraff contest:

STATE STILL LEADS
BIG TEN COURT RACE

CHICAGO, Jan. 5.—Northwestern, Ohio State and Purdue led the big ten conference basketball race today. The season officially opened last night with six teams participating.

At Evanston the Wildcats slashed their way through an overtime period to eke out a 31 to 30 victory over Wisconsin.

Joe Reiff, high scorer in the big ten last year, counted 12 of the Northwestern points.

Purdue had little trouble winning from Indiana 49 to 30. At Champaign, Ohio State gave fair notice that it is out to vindicate the disastrous season of last year. The Buckeyes whipped Illinois 29 to 28. Hoffer scored four baskets in the last ten minutes of play to bring Ohio to a victory.

Iowa, Minnesota, Chicago and Michigan will open their conference seasons Saturday. In non-conference games last night, Marquette won from Chicago, 36 to 21. Minnesota won from South Dakota, 50 to 24, and Iowa defeated Drake, 24 to 18.

WOMAN BRIDGE STAR
ANALYZES PLAY IN CONTRACT TOURNEY

Mrs. Ely Culbertson
Blames System For
Lenz Showing

(Editor's Note: Written expressly for International News Service by Josephine Culbertson, wife of Ely Culbertson and with him originator of the approach-forcing system of contract bidding.)

By JOSEPHINE CULBERTSON
World's Greatest Woman Bridge Player.
(Copyright, 1932, by I. N. S.)

NEW YORK, Jan. 5.—The bridge battle of the century, as Ely calls it, the match of 150 rubbers with Mr. Sidney S. Lenz and his partners, to test the merits of the approach-forcing and official systems of contract bidding, will end Friday. Today there remain only twenty-one rubbers to be played.

After last night's session I shall take a short vacation from play, returning however, to the bridge table Friday night to play the final session with Ely as my partner. When this match was arranged, I had agreed to play only seventy-five rubbers.

That number today has been passed, but my husband is such a romanticist that he insisted that I play the last session as the first with him.

I have been so interested in the demonstration of the accuracy of the approach-forcing system of bidding that I was willing to devote more time to the match than I had expected to do at the beginning.

An accurate count of the aces and kings held disclosed that the high cards held by the opposing sides had been about even. The matter of distribution which plays a very large part in the success or failure of contracts at the bridge table, has, if anything, favored our opponents, and yet we are 16,835 points ahead, due, as I firmly believe, to the fact that we used the better system of bidding. This might make it appear that our opponents had played badly. That is not so.

As a player and in analyzing the hands, I have watched with keen admiration the play of all three of my opponents—Mr. Lenz, Mr. Oswald Jacoby and Commander Winfield Liggett, Jr. They have lived up to their reputation as brilliant and accurate players. In view of this, the results speak for themselves.

As much cannot be said for the system of bidding used by them, however. Observe, for instance, hand No. 742, played in the 124th rubber, which, as a result of the official system bidding, cost our opponents an easily makeable vulnerable small slam. The hand and bidding follow:

South—vulnerable.	North
Culbertson	Mr. Lenz
S—5	S—A K
H—K 9 5 4 3	H—A J 7
D—Q 7 4 3	D—10 8 6 2
C—4 3 0	C—9 7 5

WEST	EAST
Culbertson	Mrs. Culbertson
S—5	S—J 6 4 3 2
H—K 9 5 4 3	H—8
D—Q 7 4 3	D—10 8 6 2
C—4 3 0	C—9 7 5

The bidding:
South West North East
Pass Pass 3 NT Pass
Pass Pass

Had the approach-forcing system been used, Mr. Lenz's opening bid would have been two clubs. Commander Liggett, who holds 1½ honors tricks, and using the approach-forcing system would know that his partner held a minimum of five honor-tricks, would respond with three notrump. North would then bid four clubs to show a re-biddable suit, and be perfectly safe in this course, as his partner could not pass until a game had been contracted for.

The final result would have been a contract of six notrump, as south, after the clubs are rebid, would raise to five clubs, and north, with 6 honor-tricks and from 8 to 9 playing-tricks, assured in his own hand and the knowledge that his partner holds at least 1½ honor-tricks, would certainly bid six notrump.

The sixth rubber of the evening was notable through the fact that all of the six hands were played at doubled contracts, and two of these doubled contracts resulted in games for our opponents.

The final hand of the rubber was an especially unfortunate one from our standpoint because the fates which watch over distribution had made every finesse to order for Mr. Lenz, who was playing a contract at doubled contracts, and who, if his finesses in hearts and diamonds lost instead of won, then instead of making a doubled contract he would have been defeated 600 to 1,000 points.

Tonight my husband will have a new partner, but one who will, I feel sure, acquit himself well. He is Mr. Michael T. Gottlieb, a member of the New York Bridge Whist Club and one of the world's ranking players, will play this one session. He is a new member of the bridge world contract team-of-four, and this is his first appearance in that capacity. I wish him lots of luck. I know he will bid and play with consummate skill.

These gridiron warriors have reached the height of every footballer's ambition—they have been named for the mythical All-American team. Outstanding stars in their positions the eleven represent the cream of America's football talent. This team was picked by sports experts of the Hearst newspapers in all parts of the country.

assisted by leading coaches. All have made history on the gridiron this season and, as the curtain drops, can look back with pride to the records they leave to their Alma Maters. For several it means goodbye to intercollegiate football owing to graduation but undoubtedly some of them will be heard from again on professional teams or as coaches.

SOCIAL FALDERALS
TARGET OF PASTOR
AT REVIVAL HERE

"Young people are being reared for social falderals when in reality they are going down in sin," declared the Rev. C. A. Hutchison, pastor of the M. E. Church, Cedarville, when he spoke at revival services at Trinity M. E. Church Monday evening. Dr. Hutchison preached to a large audience on the subject, "The Secret of Victory."

"Righteousness in the souls of people is fundamental to health and prosperity. People today are cowards just as they were in Gideon's days. They resist goodness for evil and raise their boys and girls for social falderals, thinking that will make them successful while at the same time the boys and girls are having a good time in the eyes of the world yet going down in sin," the Rev. Mr. Hutchison declared.

"Friends may be perfectly competent to swing a club or a social affair but have you ever spoken to a soul about his eternal welfare?" the Rev. Mr. Hutchison continued. "Today people say, 'God is with us.' How can they say God is with us in time of such a spiritual depression as this?"

Dr. Hutchison further condemned the Christian lethargy and timidity today in the face of a bold, sinful world.

Special music was furnished by the Sunday School Orchestra which will play at each of the services. Dr. Hutchison will speak on "The Keys to the Kingdom" at Tuesday night's services, starting at 7:30 o'clock.

May Force Sewage Disposal Efforts

COLUMBUS, Jan. 5.—Representatives of Van Wert, Bowling Green, New Bremen, Washington C. H. and Bedford have been ordered to appear before the public health council here Friday and explain why they have not built sewage disposal plants. Health Director H. G. Southard announced today.

If the explanations do not prove satisfactory in the opinion of members of the council, legal action probably will be started to compel the building of such plants, Southard said.

THIRD FATALITY

DAYTON, O., Jan. 5.—The third fatality of 1932 was registered in Dayton today with the death of John R. Buck, 68, from injuries received when he was said to have been run down by an automobile near his home. Edward King, 15, was reported near death from a fractured skull received when he was struck by a motor car while riding on his bicycle.

FORMER OHIOAN IS GIVEN GOLD MEDAL

SOUTH CHARLESTON, O., Jan. 5.—Edward M. Van Cleave, former superintendent of the South Charleston public schools and now principal of the New York Institute for the Education of the Blind, has been presented with the Leslie Dana gold medal in recognition of "outstanding achievements in the prevention of blindness and conservation of vision."

Prof. Van Cleave is the second non-medical man to receive the medal out of seven presentations which are made annually.

Prof. Van Cleave was born in Ohio in 1867 and after his graduation from Ohio Wesleyan University in 1886, taught school and served as superintendent of four different schools in as many localities before his appointment as superintendent of the Ohio State School for the Blind in 1907.

BRINGS ACTION TO REGAIN POSITION

LONDON, O., Jan. 5.—A suit to regain his job and seniority rights with the Big Four railroad has been filed in Madison County by W. A. Scully of this city.

Scully who was London agent for the Big Four for many years, also seeks an injunction against the order of railroad telegraphers prohibiting them from controlling seniority rights.

Scully charged that in May 1928 the railroad and telegraphers entered an agreement by which fifteen years of his rights were taken away. As a result the plaintiff was compelled to give up the agency for work on "swing jobs" he declared, thereby causing him a large financial loss.

Who's Who in Washington
BY CHARLES P. STEWART

Tennesseans are supposed to be "tall and lanky."

Congressman Joseph W. Byrns, who hails from Nashville, comes up to specifications as if he had been made to order.

By virtue of the Democratic organization of the house of representatives, he now is chairman of the appropriations committee.

The appropriations committee maps out Uncle Sam's expenditures.

Its chairmanship is one of the most important in congress, but not so spectacular as the majority floor leadership.

By right of seniority he should have been Democratic floor leader in the house of representatives, but he did not insist on it, for most key positions in the house would go to southerners if the seniority rule were strictly adhered to.

This would breed jealousy, a bad thing for the party, and Joe Byrns is the kind of Democrat to think of the party first and himself afterward.

Moreover, he does it gracefully; on cold-bloodedly analyzing his features, he decidedly craggy they are—in conformity with his "tall and lanky" Tennessee figure.

Then one realizes what the explanation is—his smile is what makes him look so handsome. If ever a lovable character shone in a congressman's expression it does in Congressman Joe Byrns.

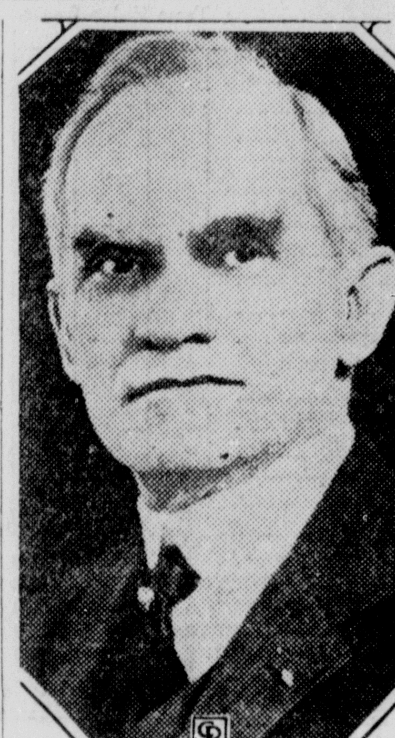

RECOVER TWO CARS; SEEK OWNER OF ONE

A Chevrolet sport coupe, belonging to S. N. McClellan, reported stolen from the garage at his home 513 S. Detroit St., early Monday night, was found abandoned on S. Columbus St., Tuesday morning, police announced. The car had been discarded when the gasoline tank became empty.

Police are also seeking to identify the owner of a Buick sedan abandoned on S. King St., Sunday night. The auto, bearing 1932 license plates issued at Cincinnati, was ordered pulled off the streets Monday by police.

PRAYER WEEK OPENS MONDAY EVENING AT REFORMED CHURCH

The annual Week of Prayer, which has been observed in Xenia for several years in a union effort, opened with services at the First Reformed Church Monday evening.

The Rev. W. W. Foust, leader, divided his subject, "The Consciousness of God," into three sections and discussed the consciousness of God in our daily need, the consciousness of God in a daily touch with our lives and the consciousness of God in times of crisis and the facing of the problems of life.

The service was conducted informally and several led in prayer. The Rev. W. H. Tilford, of the Presbyterian Church, led congregational singing of old-fashioned gospel songs.

The Rev. J. P. Lytle, pastor of the First U. P. Church will be leader Tuesday evening and will have as his subject, "Prayer for Faith and Loyalty to the Conquering Christ." The Rev. W. N. Shank will be leader Wednesday evening, the Rev. W. H. Tilford, Thursday evening and the Rev. S. L. Brill, Friday evening. Dr. H. B. McBride will bring the message Sunday evening. All of the meetings will be held in the First Reformed Church and will open each evening at 7:30 o'clock. The public is invited.

OLD BLOCKHOUSE MOVED

GOLDENDALE, Wash.—Relic of the Indian-fighting days of the old Oregon Territory, the old blockhouse here will be moved to the courthouse grounds as a protection against vagrants who sleep in it occasionally. Originally located seven miles, west of Goldendale, it was later moved to the city park.

Radio Organist To Play Two Organs At Same Time

By MILDRED MASON

A feat, which has been attracting attention since it was performed on the air two weeks ago, will be repeated in a broadcast Wednesday evening when Lew White, organist, will play two pipe organs at one time, contributing to an organ-orchestra ensemble program to be broadcast over an NBC network through station WKCY, Covington, at 8:15 o'clock.

Seated at a specially wired console in his own studios, White will control two separate instruments and blend them with a fourteen-piece orchestra, under the direction of Louis Katzman, and the Ramblers vocal trio, in a single ensemble for the performance of popular rhythmic melodies. The orchestra, minus saxophones and strong in bass, has been designed to supplement the two organs. The vocal selections introduced from time to time are presented in such a manner as to form a harmonious part of the general ensemble.

To Debate on Air

William Z. Ripley, professor of political economy at Harvard University, and Joseph Stag Lawrence, economist and former member of Princeton's faculty, will meet in debate on the railroad situation over an NBC network Wednesday afternoon at 1:15 o'clock. Allen Collins, editor of World's Work, will officiate as referee of the debate which will be held during a luncheon of the New York Advertising Club. Stations to carry the program are not listed.

Presents Varied Concert

David Guion, American cowboy-composer, whose works range from old fiddler's "breakdowns" to pure art songs, will direct his own orchestra in a series of concerts over an NBC-WEAF network on Wednesday evening from 10:30 to 11 o'clock starting this week. The title of the program will be "David Guion and His Orchestra" but stations to carry it are not announced.

Vaudeville Star is Guest

Trixie Friganza, for many years a star of musical comedy and vaudeville, will be heard as guest artist in a program to be broadcast over the Columbia network through station WKRC, Cincinnati, Wednesday evening at 10 o'clock.

WKRC Changes Hands

Radio fans are interested in the announcement of the acquisition of the Gruen Watchmaker's Guild's interest of station WKRC, Cincinnati, by the H. and S. Pongue Co., Cincinnati. The change went into effect January 1.

Lipstick Girl
A Romance of Little Beauty
EDNA ROBB WEBSTER
Author of "DAD'S GIRL," "JORETTA" and "LOVE PREFERRED"

READ THIS FIRST:

Marcia Moyer who has worked in the cosmetics department of the largest store in Mitchellfield, does her work so well that she is given an opportunity to travel all over the country to demonstrate beauty products for a New York company. She leaves Ted Stanton in Mitchellfield, who has loved her for always, but she is seeking romance and wants to see the world. In Chicago, the district manager, Ed Haley, takes her to dinner and they become better acquainted. In the meantime, an airplane made a forced landing near Mitchellfield, and the pilot meets Vivian, Marcia's sister, to whom he is attracted at once. Haley is a pleasant, sportsman type of fellow whom Marcia likes very much but is not particularly interested. (NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY.)

CHAPTER 14

ON SATURDAY, there was another letter from Ted—brief and illegibly excited. He had taken the aviator's offer. It was too good to turn down, even at the risk of his life, and he would not be flying much, anyway. But it meant that he had to go to Springfield once a week to overhaul the motors when Campeau came through from the south on his regular route.

"I am glad something new to think about, honey, since I can't be with you. I think about you plenty, wherever I am. Besides, with this extra jack I am earning, I can get into business for myself sooner. That means I can take care of my girl when she will let me. And you don't need three guesses to know who she is, either. You see, I haven't given up. I follow up my personal arguments with correspondence and I don't use form letters, you can bet. Each one is strictly original and individual. I haven't had a word from you yet, but then I guess you are some busy. Hope you are O. K. honey, and that the world is treating you grand. Ever faithfully yours, Ted."

He was sweet, Marcia thought but absolutely incorrigible. Her heart skipped a beat with the thought of the danger which his new work involved. The next moment, she was musing, "Foolish, that we all so instinctively think first of danger, when we think of flying, or anything that has to do with it. I wonder if the world ever will take aviation seriously and treat it less like an infant who is just tottering across the floor for the first time, certainly destined to fall. Well, Ted is right to get into the best racket of his game. Besides, if he gets away from Mitchellfield once in awhile, he might find a nice girl who will appreciate him."

Whereupon, she dismissed Ted for the moment, having more important things to consider. One was what to wear this night. Ed Haley was taking her up on the north shore to a swanky roadhouse. He had wanted to take her out every night that she remained in the city, but Marcia had been firm.

"No, Ed, you are a peach of a fellow, but I'm not taking advantage of you just now when you are away from the midair, as it were. You are neither married nor free and I guess you don't know, your self, where or what you are. You might get foolish notions about me that would only make things worse for you. Out of the ocean and on to a desert island, or something like that."

"But, Marcia, you don't know what this means to me. I shouldn't mind the desert island, so long as you are there too."

"There you are! You'd better take a dose of your own advice, Ed. Remember? Just because you are lonesome, don't get enchanted with some ship that passes in the night," she reminded him.

"Oh, forget it this is different," he sobbed.

"It is? Well, I'll have to inspect a few more ships before I can make a comparison. No wonder you made a mistake with marriage. You will most certainly do it again, if you insist on making these rash decisions."

Marcia thought, "Now, wouldn't I be a dumb-bell to fall for the first man of the world I meet and kill my chances for a grand adventure, just because he gives me a fairly genuine line of chatter and he seems to deserve sympathy and all that? Not much! Why, even if he affected me that way, I'd be crazy to cancel the chance I've got to settle down here a few miles from Mitchellfield. But he doesn't even impress me. So that is that!"

She related about Saturday night because there had seemed to be no very good reason why she should not go. On Tuesday, she would travel on to her next assignment, and this was about her last chance for entertainment and companionship for a long time, perhaps. She had read all the books that well-wishing friends had bestowed upon her when she left home, and considered that she had disciplined herself very well on this first occasion in a great city with its alluring possibilities. There had been several of the men whom she met who would have been delighted to entertain her, but none of them had appealed to her, particularly.

Marcia was not one of those girls who welcomed entertainment merely for the sake of excitement. If it also offered pleasant association or mutual interests, she considered that the time was well spent. Otherwise, a sad book offered better entertainment. At least, if the book turned out to be a disappointment or made itself obnoxious, she could dismiss it instantly; whereas, a dull or difficult companion was not disposed of so easily.

But Ed Haley was neither dull nor difficult, and she might have gone about with him more while she was in the city, but he had not still been more or less married. Marcia was that way—just a trifle old-fashioned and conventional about such things. That was why she became a little agitated at the bizarre assembly at the North Shore club and their most unconventional ideas of what constituted entertainment. She reflected that it was no wonder her traveling saleswoman acquaintances had dismissed Paradise Inn near Mitchellfield with amused shrugs, and had intimated that she had seen nothing yet. And of, by the same rule, the larger the city, the more risque its entertainment, she had no precedent by which to surmise what she would find in New York. "But do—nice people come here?" Marcia exclaimed with surprise, and looked around her fearfully.

"Well, the best people do, if that is what you mean. There seems to be some distinction in that way. I just brought you here because you were so keen about seeing the world," Ed explained.

"Then we must as well enjoy ourselves while we are here," she suggested lightly. "I am glad, though, that the world is not all just like this."

"A lot of it is, all right. I know what you mean, though, Marcia. You are a woman after my own fancy. Don't you think we could be pretty happy together if we decided to try it?"

"You might be surprised to know how many are made, and accepted, in such places as this."

"No wonder the divorce rate is so high. The world must be going ga-ga," she shrugged, gazing around the room where men sat casually with their arms around the girls beside them, or couples danced in close embrace to music that would do justice to the frenzied musicians of African jungle tribes.

FORMER OHIOAN IS GIVEN GOLD MEDAL

SOUTH CHARLESTON, O., Jan. 5.—Edward M. Van Cleave, former superintendent of the South Charleston public schools and now principal of the New York Institute for the Education of the Blind, has been presented with the Leslie Dana gold medal in recognition of "outstanding achievements in the prevention of blindness and conservation of vision."

Prof. Van Cleave is the second non-medical man to receive the medal out of seven presentations which are made annually.

Prof. Van Cleave was born in Ohio in 1867 and after his graduation from Ohio Wesleyan University in 1886, taught school and served as superintendent of four different schools in as many localities before his appointment as superintendent of the Ohio State School for the Blind in 1907.

BRINGS ACTION TO REGAIN POSITION

LONDON, O., Jan. 5.—A suit to regain his job and seniority rights with the Big Four railroad has been filed in Madison County by W. A. Scully of this city.

Scully who was London agent for the Big Four for many years, also seeks an injunction against the order of railroad telegraphers prohibiting them from controlling seniority rights.

Scully charged that in May 1928 the railroad and telegraphers entered an agreement by which fifteen years of his rights were taken away. As a result the plaintiff was compelled to give up the agency for work on "swing jobs" he declared, thereby causing him a large financial loss.

Who's Who in Washington

BY CHARLES P. STEWART

Tennesseans are supposed to be "tall and lanky."

Congressman Joseph W. Byrns, who hails from Nashville, comes up to specifications as if he had been made to order.

By virtue of the Democratic organization of the house of representatives, he now is chairman of the appropriations committee.

The appropriations committee maps out Uncle Sam's expenditures.

Its chairmanship is one of the most important in congress, but not so spectacular as the majority floor leadership.

By right of seniority he should have been Democratic floor leader in the house of representatives, but he did not insist on it, for most key positions in the house would go to southerners if the seniority rule were strictly adhered to.

This would breed jealousy, a bad thing for the party, and Joe Byrns is the kind of Democrat to think of the party first and himself afterward.

Moreover, he does it gracefully; not under the influence of thumbscrews and the rack, like the average politician who has to sacrifice something to which he feels entitled.

Congressman Byrns gives the impression of a very fine-looking, elderly man, and it is with considerable astonishment that one discovers, on cold-bloodedly analyzing his features, how decidedly crazy they are in conformity with his "tall and lanky" Tennessee figure.

Then one realizes what the explanation is—his smile is what makes him look so handsome. If ever a lovable character shone in a congressman's expression it does in Congressman Joe Byrns.

The annual Week of Prayer, which has been observed in Xenia for several years in a union effort, opened with services at the First Reformed Church Monday evening.

The Rev. W. W. Foust, leader, divided his subject, "The Consciousness of God," into three sections and discussed the consciousness of God in our daily need, the consciousness of God in times of crisis and the facing of the problems of life.

The service was conducted informally and several led in prayer. The Rev. W. H. Tilford, of the Presbyterian Church, led congregational singing of old-fashioned gospel songs.

The Rev. J. P. Lytle, pastor of the First U. P. Church will be leader Tuesday evening and will have as his subject, "Prayer for Faith and Loyalty to the Conquering Christ." The Rev. W. N. Shank will be leader Wednesday evening, the Rev. W. H. Tilford, Thursday evening and the Rev. S. L. Bell, Friday evening. Dr. H. B. McElree will bring the message Sunday evening. All of the meetings will be held in the First Reformed Church and will open each evening at 7:30 o'clock. The public is invited.

OLD BLOCKHOUSE MOVED

GOLDENDALE, Wash.—Relic of the Indian-fighting days of the old Oregon Territory, the old blockhouse here will be moved to the courthouse grounds as a protection against vandals who sleep in it occasionally. Originally located seven miles west of Goldendale, it was later moved to the city park.

Radio Organist To Play Two Organs At Same Time

By MILDRED MASON

A feat, which has been attracting attention since it was performed on the air two weeks ago, will be repeated in a broadcast Wednesday evening when Lew White, organist, will play two pipe organs at one time, contributing to an organ-orchestra ensemble program to be broadcast over an NBC network through station WKYC, Covington, at 8:15 o'clock.

Seated at a specially wired console in his own studios, White will control two separate instruments and blend them with a fourteen-piece orchestra, under the direction of Louis Katzman, and the Ramblers vocal trio, in a single ensemble for the performance of popular rhythmic

The Universal program for 1932 includes several substitutions for pictures originally announced for the first part of the year but later considered to be of insufficient merit or adaptability to maintain the company's standards. Productions discarded include "A Lady of Resources," by Arthur Somers Roche, which will be replaced by Dale Collins' story, "The Adventure Lady"; "Bullet Proof" by W. R. Burnett, "Gallows" by Roland Brown and "Barbary Coast," which will be replaced by the British-made picture "Michael and Mary," by "Brown of Culver" and "Ambition" by Emil Cavreaux. The Carle Laemmle twenty-sixth anniversary jubilee will be celebrated during January and February. Jubilee productions will be released during these two months. January releases will be "Strictly Dishonorable" by Preston Sturges, with Paul Lukas, Sidney Fox and Lewis Stone; "The Unexpected Father" by Dale Van Every, starring Slim Summerville and Zasu Pitts and "Michael and Mary" by A. A. Milne, with Edna Best and Herbert Marshall.

Twenty Years '12-Ago-'32

Mr. and Mrs. Nelson Sparks arrived home from Dayton, Fla., where they spent the Christmas holidays.

Members of the new city council enjoyed a theater party at the Bijou as the invited guests of the owner, all of them marching in on a bogus ticket signed by one of the councilmen who appointed himself a committee of one on "ways and means."

Fleming Dean, son of County Auditor and Mrs. Walter L. Dean, was host at a dinner party at his home on W. Market St., the occasion being his twelfth birthday.

Manager Lowell Fess, of the 1912 basketball team of Antioch College, has arranged a sixteen game schedule for the team.

The jubilee releases in February will be Walter Huston in "Law and Order," by W. R. Burnett; "Speed Crazy," with Slim Summerville, Louise Fazenda, Frank Albertson and June Clyde and "Murders in the Rue Morgue," the Edgar Allan Poe story, with Bella Lugosi, Sidney Fox and others.

Though the order is not definite, the balance of the 1932 productions include: Lew Ayres in "The Impatient Maiden" by Donald Henderson Clarke, with Mae Clarke, Una Merkel, John Halliday, Helen Jerome Eddy and Andy Devine; "Back Streets," by Fannie Hurst; "Marriage Interlude" by Luigi Pirandello, with Tala Birell; "The Invisible Man" by H. G. Wells, with Boris Karloff; "The Adventure Lady" by Dale Collins; "The Cohens and Kellys in Hollywood" with George Sidney and Charlie Murray; "Destiny Rides Again" by Max Brand, with Tom Mix and at least two more Mix pictures; "Night Club," "Steel Men" and "Laughing Boy" by Frank La Farge.

Last year Laemmle started four young hopefuls on their way to screen fame. One was Sidney Fox who made an impression in "Strictly Dishonorable"; one was Genevieve Tobin, who played in "A Lady Surrenders"; "Up for Murder" and "Seed"; another was Rose Hobart, whose latest was "East of

GRAND JURY UNABLE TO COMPLETE PROBE AT FIRST SESSION

A two-day session of the January grand jury was made necessary when the investigating body was unable to dispose of an unusually heavy criminal docket Monday. The jury adjourned at 4:30 p. m. Monday and was reconvened Tuesday morning.

With twenty-four cases for consideration and more than thirty witnesses to be examined, the jury voted upon eleven cases at its session Monday, according to Prosecuting Attorney Marcus McCallister.

Of chief importance is the case of six men accused of complicity in the torture-robbery at the Charles Monnett farm home, near Yellow Springs, last November 20. Announcement was made that the case of Vern Wilson, 45, Wilmington Pike, arrested for the theft shortly after twelve chickens disappeared from the D. H. Keltner farm early Sunday morning, was placed directly before the grand jury. Authorities dispensed with preliminary arraignment of the suspect.

EAST END NEWS

Mrs. Bertha Rose has returned home after spending the holidays as the guest of Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Burbanks and Mrs. Mary E. Vergil Peyton, Columbus, O. Damon Lodge, K. of P., No. 29, will meet Tuesday evening promptly at 7:30. The members are urged to be present.

Mr. and Mrs. J. B. Winn, Mrs. Adell Pinkney and Mrs. Mary E. Thomas of Ft. Wayne were holiday visitors of Mr. and Mrs. Sandy Watson and Mrs. Joanna Payne, E. Main St.

Miss Mattie A. Thomas, E. Main St., is visiting with relatives and friends in Ft. Wayne and Indianapolis, Ind., and Louisville, Ky. Miss Thomas is a student at Wilberforce University.

Mr. and Mrs. Elijah Gilbert, Mr. and Mrs. Sandy Watson, Mrs. Joanna Payne and Mr. Samuel Hawkins attended the services of the Church of God in Washington C. H. Sunday.

Mrs. Bertha Boothe, E. Market St., has returned from the holiday visit of two weeks with her son-in-law and daughter, Dr. and Mrs. William Harris, Chicago, Ill.

NO SUCCESSOR TO POST DECIDED UPON

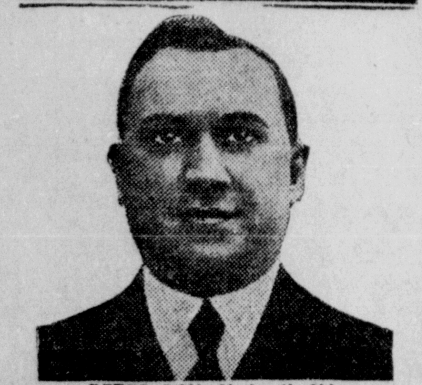

Appointment of a successor to Miss Emma F. Lyon, former executive secretary of Greene County Chapter, American Red Cross, whose resignation became effective December 31, has not been made according to an announcement Monday by Wilson W. Galloway, Xenia, chairman of the chapter. Several applicants are being considered.

Although Miss Lyon's resignation was not effective until December 31 she left Xenia for Ironton several weeks ago, and since that time the local Red Cross office has been in charge of Miss Katherine Smith.

G. M. AUSTIN AGAIN HEADS FAIR BOARD

Associated with the annual county fair for more than forty years as a member of the fair board, G. M. Austin, Bellbrook, was elected president of the Greene County Agricultural Society for the ninth consecutive year at the annual reorganization meeting Saturday in the offices of County Commissioners.

Present officers of the board were all re-elected for 1932. Grant Miller, Treblein, is vice-president; J. Robert Bryson, near Xenia, is secretary, and B. U. Bell, Xenia, is treasurer.

Swollen Feet Relieved by Malva

"I suffered for years and years and paid out hundreds of dollars trying to get relief from swollen ankles and feet and the acute nerve-wracking pain in them, thinking it due to fallen arches and muscular displacement," says Peter Day, prominent Cincinnati grocer.

"A friend suggested that my condition was more than likely due to the condition of my blood and as he was taking MALVA, he suggested that I also try it. In a few short weeks my feet and ankles were entirely normal, and my wife and I went to our first dance in twenty years. I simply cannot recommend MALVA too highly."

Brides for Sale—Reasonable (?)

The epidemic of would-be brides who are placing themselves upon the auction block with neat price tags around their necks is growing to alarming proportions. For prices ranging from $1,000 to $15,000 it is possible to secure almost any type of wife one can desire—blonde, brunette, sweet or stylish stout. The auction block matrimony wave now sweeping the country was started when Mary Clowes, of New Eagle, Pa., recently offered to marry any respectable white man who would give her $10,000 to take care of her parents. In less than a week after Mary had climbed upon the block, her example had been followed by three other Pennsylvania girls. Virginia Mae Parker, of Pittsburgh, undercut Mary's offer by 50 per cent, pricing herself at $5,000, and giving a sick father as the reason for her presence in the marriage market. Soon the fad began to spread and "brides for sale" is now almost as common as apartments for rent, all over the country. That the idea is also taking root in the male mind is evident from the offer of William Roberts, 28-year-old Chicagoan, who tells the world that he'll make a good husband for some lonely she-male who can put up $10,000 purchase price.

PITTSBURGH, Pa., Jan. 4.—Are you tired of being the captain of your soul? In other words, do you want a wife? If so, now is the time to get in your bid, for never has there been such a variety of brides offered for sale.

Of course the question of price is an important item that must be taken into consideration when you make your decision. But as the scale of prices ranges from $1,000 to $15,000, it may be said that there is a bride to suit every pocketbook. If you don't happen to possess the minimum price—well, buy yourself a wire-haired terrier.

This epidemic of auction block matrimony was started by Mary Clowes, a 21-year-old waitress of New Eagle, Pa., who recently offered to marry any respectable white man who would assure her of $10,000 for the care of her parents.

In less than a week after Mary had set herself upon the auction block three other Pennsylvania girls had "muscle into her racket"—to borrow a little racketeer parlance. Virginia Mae Parker, of Pittsburgh, not only followed Mary's lead, but was guilty of shameless undercutting; for Virginia put the price tag on herself at $5,000. She promises to love, honor and obey any American man in good health, regardless of his age, for that modest sum. A sick father is the reason for Virginia's appearance in the marriage market.

The next lot to voluntarily go under the hammer was Marguerite Lennon, an Irish blonde, also of Pittsburgh, who values herself at $10,000 and requires the purchaser to be healthy and white. Miss Lennon so far has failed to specify her reason for the auction.

"Block brides" hit a new high the other day when Pauline Lange, also of the Steel City, offered to marry any respectable white man for $15,000.

All of the girls have received offers to date, but haven't made a choice, apparently waiting until all bids are in before committing themselves.

But it is not only in Pittsburgh that the matrimonial auction epidemic is raging. Similar tales come in from all over the country. In fact, the supply is far in excess of the demand—which is but natural in the depressed times through which we are passing. Besides, the prices quoted merely provide for the initial outlay, the little question of upkeep being kept discreetly in the background.

The great drawback to the success of these "bought and paid for" marriages is that the purchaser is either a crank or is old and ugly. Instances where they have turned out happily are as rare as the eggs of the dodo. And if the young women who offer themselves for sale so courageously would only pause for a moment to think they'd see that the prospect of the handsome dashing man of their dreams coming to bid for them is very remote.

Handsome, dashing men are so very rare that they do not have to purchase their brides. On the contrary, they usually have a hard time dodging the would-be brides who would willingly throw themselves away gratis.

Take William Roberts, for instance. William, who hails from Chicago, not only scoffs at the idea of buying a bride, but has actually set a $10,000 value upon himself. He is more broadminded than the women auctioneers, for he bars nobody who can put up the necessary cash. He's had no offers yet, but he'll surely make a nifty gigolo for some lucky (?) girl.

It might interest the brides-for-sale to know also that if an American man is so badly in need of a mate that he is willing to marry a woman he has never seen, he not only need not pay for the privilege, but there are many women who would be glad to pay a thousand dollars or so for the protection of his name. It is well known that Cuban women will pay highly for an American husband. This is their method of beating the immigration law.

GRAND JURY UNABLE TO COMPLETE PROBE AT FIRST SESSION

A two-day session of the January grand jury was made necessary when the investigating body was unable to dispose of an unusually heavy criminal docket Monday. The jury adjourned at 4:30 p. m. Monday and was reconvened Tuesday morning.

With twenty-four cases for consideration and more than thirty witnesses to be examined, the jury voted upon eleven cases at its session Monday, according to Prosecuting Attorney Marcus McCallister.

Of chief importance is the case of six men accused of complicity in the torture-robbery at the Charles Monnett farm home, near Yellow Springs, last November 20. Announcement was made that the case of Vern Wilson, 45, Wilmington Pike, arrested for the theft shortly after twelve chickens disappeared from the D. H. Ketter farm early Sunday morning, was placed directly before the grand jury. Authorities dispensed with preliminary arraignment of the suspect.

Swollen Feet Relieved by Malva

"I suffered for years and years and paid out hundreds of dollars trying to get relief from swollen ankles and feet and the acute nerve-racking pain in them, thinking it due to fallen arches and muscular displacement," says Peter Day, prominent Cincinnati groceryman.

A friend suggested that my condition was more than likely due to the condition of my blood and as he was taking MALVA, he suggested that I also try it. In a few short weeks my feet and ankles were entirely normal, and my wife and I went to our first dance in twenty years. I simply cannot recommend MALVA too highly."

Brides for Sale—Reasonable (?)

"Auction" Matrimony Enjoying Unprecedented Boom at Wide Price Range. Groom Also on the Block.

The epidemic of would-be brides who are placing themselves upon the auction block with neat price tags around their necks is growing to alarming proportions. For prices ranging from $1,000 to $15,000 it is possible to secure almost any type of wife one can desire—blonde, brunette, svelte or stylish stout. The auction block matrimony wave now sweeping the country was started when Mary Clowes, of New Eagle, Pa., recently offered to marry any respectable white man who would give her $10,000 to take care of her parents. In less than a week after Mary had climbed upon the block, her example had been followed by three other Pennsylvania girls. Virginia Mae Parker, of Pittsburgh, undercut Mary's offer by 50 per cent, pricing herself at $5,000, and giving a sick father as the reason for her presence in the marriage market. Soon the fad began to spread and "brides for sale" is now almost as common as apartments for rent, all over the country. That the idea is also taking root in the male mind is evident from the offer of William Roberts, 28-year-old Chicagoan, who tells the world that he'll make a good husband for some lonely she-male who can put up $10,000 purchase price.

PITTSBURGH, Pa., Jan. 4.—Are you tired of being the captain of your soul? In other words, do you want a wife? If so, now is the time to get in your bid, for never has there been such a variety of brides offered for sale.

Of course the question of price is an important item that must be taken into consideration when you make your decision. But as the scale of prices ranges from $1,000 to $15,000, it may be said that there is a bride to suit every pocketbook. If you don't happen to possess the minimum price—well, buy yourself a wire-haired terrier.

This epidemic of auction block matrimony was started by Mary Clowes, a 21-year-old waitress of New Eagle, Pa., who recently offered to marry any respectable white man who would assure her of $10,000 for the care of her parents.
